He was prosperous, he took an interest in his adopted city, was elected to the City Council, and held an official position in Pirst Methodist Church. Several years ago he retired with a competence; taker the world easy: plays with his grandchildren; goes fishing; raises chickens for the family table, and occasionally takes a trip back to Canada, and the old home. He and Mrs. Hill spent the best part of June here this year. And when the precious hours are done. The next occupant of the old pictur gallery was Holly Ramahaw, who had been apprenticed with Charles Hill, and made a worthy successor. He, too, prospered, and like the others, decided to try business on a wider scale and went to Detroit. There he became a leader to his profession, and with his wife and family, enjoys or busy summer in the north and a lasy winter in the south.
