Acton, July 17, 1930.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Dolos: It seems only a few short years ago since you first came to make your home in our midst; and yet a quarter of a century has passed since that long voyage from the Old Land. You came as bride and - groom, strangers to a strange town, but not friendless for long, for your cheery, natures and kind hospitality soon established many friendships. These have endured for after these years, on this twenty-fifth anniversary of your wedding, we know you both better and like you better than ever. It is good for our community as well as for each individual to be able to look to a home where for twentyfive years the atmosphere has been one of unity, with each partner always seeking the welfare and happyness of the other; and where the children of the family have been taught honor and respect, and reverence for God. We know that you do not like flowery compliments but we
