FURNITURE There are no August sales on fine motor cars, diamond necklaces, Government bonds, so why should Furniture, honestly priced, be sold cheaper in August than in June or September? We price our Furniture as close to actual cost as merchandising will allow and our regular prices are often less than the "Special Price" elsewhere. So there will be no slacking of prices this August, or any other month at our store. But there will be big bargains—more during this month than usual, as it's our housecleaning time, getting ready for fall goods. Boy Scout News ACTON BULLDOG TROOP (Report Given by Cross) After the rain let up Saturday night Bing and Albert escorted Scout's aunt and cousin back to town (those two friends arrived before the rain). Before they reached town the rain came down in torrents again, and Albert, having his slither, put it around Scout's aunt as they were in the lead. Bing's nerve increased, and so he perched on the top of his young lady. When they arrived in Acton, they could not find a place open for the Scouts. The poor rain-drenched Scouts had to crawl out in the rain and loosen the guy ropes, and then find up things inside, and had a good feed of plums before retiring. Breakfast ready. After that good meal, about 8:30 the early birds woke up and found a delightful day dawned, and sang "Happy Days Are Here Again." We were soon up and at work getting numerous tasks, and an early dinner was served. Visitors soon began to come, and were full of congratulations to the Scouts for the way in which the numerous signs in camp were arranged and fixed up. The boys from the Owl and Eagle Patrol have camped around, and we are hoping to get better opposition in patrol work now. At three o'clock we were off in for a swim, and the visitors took pleasure in watching the numerous stunts performed by a few of the better swimmers. When we had enough of our camp site and had our dinner, we began to prepare for dinner, which we were soon busy preparing. The Ours were told to hang on to the flag, and we were going to be hard to accomplish this task. It will take a patrol to beat us, so let us see what the rest of the patrol can do.
