CHAS. TAYLOR, Bronto Charles Taylor, the oldest citizen of Bronte, and a resident for nearly 51 years, passed away at his home, in his eighty-seventh year. Mr. Taylor had been blind for a few years, and confined to bed for part of the time, but his death was sudden and unexpected. Mr. Taylor's death removes one who was closely connected with the industrial life of the Bronte district over a long period. For many years he supplied fruit growers of this section with containers of many kinds from his factory on the old Lake Bhore Road, now the Toronto-Hamilton Highway, and he also operated a sawmill'until a very few years agor on the Twelve Mile Creek; just below the present highway bridge, turning out thousands of feet of lumber, and shipped from Bronto harbor to many lake ports. A Personal Responsibility

After spending Sunday in pleasureseeking, and neglecting to attend either the morning or the evening service in his church, an official member of one of our local churches, while in a reflective modo, was overheard to remark, when he heard the attendance was small: "Well, If all-our church members were just like me, what kind of a church would our

The subject was: "Resolved that the spoken word has more influence than the written word," and was led by Miss MacMillan, for the affirmative, and Miss M. Orr, for the negative. A novel feature of the debate was that the Boclety was divided into two bides that night and had a part in the debate. More than 40 speeches were made and many of them of considerable morit. The executive have prepared a very good programme for the winter months and next meeting November 3, will take the form of a Hallowe'en party.

Ble | has been engaged in recreational and physical education work in Toronto and Vancouver for several years and was councillor at Miss Edgar's camp at Olen Bernard. Miss Moore is a niece of Mr. II. P. Moore, of Acton, and many citizens remember well her father, Mr. S. II. Moore, who was born and raised in Acton.

Five Injured in Collision

One person is in St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto, suffering from severe injuries, and five more are badly cut and bruked as the result of a head-on collision between two cars Sunday night about three miles east of Oakville. A. Mowczanuk, Tonawanda Street, Buffalo, driver of one of the cars, is in the hospital, seriously injured. He was charged by police with rockless driving. The Annual O. A. C. Sale vicinity of Oakville fell proy to flames when, at three o'clock Wednesday morning, Ashbury's mill, located on the sixth line, about 100 yards west of the Canadian Pacific Ratiway station, was burnt to the ground. The houses around the mill were saved, also part of the office equipment and the elevator but the damage to the mill is estimated at over $5,000. The first inkling of the blaze was made known when one of the residents near the mill gave the alarm. The Oakville fire fighters hurried to the fire but the flames had gained headway and all that remained at six o'clock was the walls. Ashbury's mill, built by Y. K. Chisholm, in 1837, was one of the first mills br the district, and although operating for nearly 100 years this is the first fire experienced. The mill came into the hands of L. Ashbury some years ugo and a few years ago he sold to the present owners, Hammond Brothers, of Oakville.
