PRENTATION TO REV. MR. BENNIE

Of Pulpit Gown from Members of Cast of Young People's Play—Also Present Cheque to Young People's Society

An interesting meeting of the Session and members of the Young People's Guild was held in Knox Church last Thursday evening, obviously for the purpose of entertaining the cast of the play recently presented under the auspices of Guild, but the gathering developed later into one of even greater moment.

The following programme was enjoyed: An instrumental trio by Mrs. Wm. Hall, Robert and William; a piano duet by Mr. and Mrs. P. Balt; a reading by Miss Vera Hurst; a vocal solo by Mr. Wm. Burton; a violin solo by Mr. R. Spellvogel; and a vocal duett by Messrs. V. Rumley and R. Spellvogel. Mr. C. Kirkness, one of the cast of the play, presented the Guild members with a cheque for one hundred and sixty-eight dollars, the proceeds of the play.

Rev. Mr. Bennie was then called to the platform, and the following address, written by Miss Isabel Anderson, was read by Mr. J. Hurst, during the reading of which a pulpit gown, bought with part of the proceeds of the play, was presented by Mr. V. Rumley:

"To Rev. H. L. Bennie, M. A.:

The moment is vibrant with silent acclaim,
Heart whispering to heart, in an eloquent hush,
Profuse with solemnity, as when a flame
Revealed Him in tongues and a non-consumed bush.

Behold we a mantle of beauty and grace,
Soft-silken, and suitably sombre of hue;
And over thy shoulders we now proudly place
This vesture of office, with faith pledged anew.

As thus it enfolds you, God grant you, we pray,
Refreshing of spirit, rekindling of vow,
The beauty of holiness shining each day,
The power of sobriety, ever and now;

A faith undiminished, grown riper with years;
A wisdom to choose, and a might that can't yield;
A heart that must pity our ignorant tears;
Contempt for vain-glory, thought but of the field.

Consider this emblem of God upon earth:
With reverent hand we now offer it thee:
Profane not its majesty, mystery, worth;
But guard well its honor, and diligently;

That so, when thy cycle of years has been spent,
And thou from our valley hast fared o'er the hill,
A yearning to follow may foil our content,
And waft our tradition to lands near or chill.

On the occasion of his being presented with a clerical gown, through the merit of his own most creditable effort, and with the compliments of the cast of the play, presented under the auspices of the Young People's Guild of Knox Church, Acton, Ontario, Thursday, May 21, 1931."

Mr. Bennie expressed deep appreciation and gave an enlightening explanation of the origin of the gown and the significance of its form.

A dainty lunch was served, and the meeting was brought to a close with a vote of gratitude to the donors of the beautiful gift, expressed, on behalf of the Session by Mr. Wm. Cooper, and seconded by Mr. H. Awrey.

THE GLADIOLUS

The gladiolus is one of the most popular flowers, and rightly so. It is of easy culture and can be obtained in a great range of colors, with flowers of various shapes and sizes. Some of the flowers are very brilliant in color and some are of soft and subdued hues, suiting all tastes. The effect of a number of these flowers in bloom on a single stem at one time is very striking.

Any good garden soil is suitable. The corms or bulbs may be planted as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring but where the season is long a time is chosen that will bring them into bloom when required. They are planted three to four inches deep in groups, with the corms about four inches apart or in rows two or three feet apart. Do not use diseased corms. They should be in full sunlight and the soil should be kept well cultivated to keep down the weeds.

For cut flowers the stems may be cut when the first bud opens, leaving two sets of leaves to help build up the new corms. The corms are dug before there is danger of their being frozen and left to dry in the cellar and kept dry all winter.

There are hundreds of varieties of gladioli and many varieties have been tested at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ontario. A few of the best ones are the following: Albatross, Joerg's White, Mrs. Dr. Norton, Apple Blossom, Golden Dream, Golden Measure, Dr. F. E. Benett, Majestic, Sultan, Purple Glory, Apricot Glow, Giant Nymph, Pfitzer's Triumph, W. H. Phipps, Evelyn Kirkland, Charles Dickens, Veilchenblau, Anna Eberius.

TIME AND MONEY

The best illustration of the value of brief speech received in dollars was given by Mark Twain. His story was that when he had listened for five minutes to the preacher telling of the heathen he wept, and was going to give fifty dollars, after ten minutes more of the service, he reduced the amount of his prospective contribution to twenty-five dollars, and after half an hour more of eloquence he cut the sum to five dollars. At the end of an hour of oratory when the plate was passed, he stole two dollars.

INCOMPARABLE HORSEMANSHIP

The picked horsemen of the famous Pony Express that, beginning in 1860, carried letters over a route of nineteen hundred and fifty miles between St. Joseph, Missouri, and San Francisco were each expected to ride seventy-five miles before giving up the pouch, which made the journey in eight days. How much more remarkable is a horseback ride of eighteen hundred miles made by one man in nine days!

An old Mongol named Tzeren—so Mr. Ferdinand Ossendowski tells us in "Beasts, Men and Gods"—was the rider. He was sent from Ulissutai, in central outer Mongolia, as a special envoy to Peking with important dispatches. He prepared himself for the journey by binding his abdomen, his chest, his legs, his arms and his neck with strong cotton bandages to protect himself from the racks and strains of such a period in the saddle. In his cap he bore three eagle feathers as a token that he had received orders to fly like a bird. Armed with a special document called a tzara, which gave him the right to receive at all post stations the best horses, one to ride and one fully saddled to lead as a change, together with two oulatchen, or guards, to accompany him and bring back the horses from the next station, or ourton, he made the distance of from fifteen to thirty miles between stations at full gallop, stopping only long enough to have the horses and guards changed.

Ahead of him rode one oulatchen with the best horses to enable him to announce and prepare in advance the complement of steeds at the next station. Each oulatchen had three horses in all, so that he could swing from one that had given out and release him to graze until his return.

At every third ourton, without leaving his saddle, the dispatch bearer received a cup of hot green tea with salt and after drinking continued his race southward. After seventeen or eighteen hours of such riding he stopped at the ourton for the night,—or what was left of it—devoured a leg of broiled mutton and slept. Thus he ate once a day, and five times a day he had tea; and so he travelled for nine days!

SHINING IN USE

It was early spring; time to begin work in the garden. John, the gardener of the family, got out his spade and hoe and rake. He looked them over and said ruefully:

"Pretty well rusted. They'll work hard for a while. But I'll soon remedy that. After I've used them an hour or two, they will be smooth, and shining like new," and he went off whistling to begin spading.

He knew the secret of keeping his tools shining and in working order. Any good workman knows it. Any good mechanic knows that his machinery must be oiled and polished to mirror brightness to do its best work; and that it keeps brighter when in use.

Yet there are people who forget that this rule holds good in other things beside tools and machines.

"Nothing to do all summer. Great!" exulted a high school boy when the term ended in the spring. "Here is where I get in one grand loaf." And he did. He never opened a book all summer. He didn't go in for any summer activities that would strengthen his muscles, or exercise his brains. He idled about, playing half-heartedly, and shirking all the work he could. And when the fall term opened, he was so rusty in his class work that it took weeks for him to get going anywhere near smoothly again.

That doesn't mean that a follow has to study all summer. It does mean that he should do something—with energy enough to keep his mind alert and working, his body in good trim. Then he will start in with the fall school work, refreshed by the change of the summer's activities; keen and ready to take up his studies with renewed zest, not enervated and rusty from idleness, mental and physical.

Janet declined a tempting invitation to spend several summer weeks with a friend who was inviting others, too, and would be sure to show them all a good time.

"I can't risk it," Janet explained. "I'd miss my music lessons and practice; and that would mean getting rusty and failing in the test that comes this fall. By that test I stand or fall in my chances for a real musical education. Aunt Margaret is paying my way. I'm afraid I couldn't convince her that a few weeks' fun was worth more than my music."

Nor would it be. Who would give up the shining years of a successful musical career for a few days of play? Who would choose "not to shine in use," as Tennyson puts it, for some passing ease, or pleasure? For there's a beauty in the commonest tool burnished by constant use; a beauty in anything done well by faithful practice; a beauty of soul won by constant use of all its faculties, that can be won in no other way.

Who would "rust unburnished"—Tennyson again, when they can "shine in use"?—Cora S. Day.

BACK-SEAT MUSIC

Turn to the right, John! More to the right. . . . Now a little bit to the left! Too far—I told you so. . . . Back—that's right—back a little more. . . . Turn it! John! That's it. . . . No! Will you ever get it? . . . Gently. . . . Ah, now we can sit back in comfort. . . . Leave it there, John. . . . I knew if I told you how to do it, you'd get Station KOA.

OTHERS TOUCH AND TOUCH AGAIN

"What a lot of friends we lose through their borrowing money from us."

"Yes, it is touch and go with most of them."
