The engagement is announced of Veda Elizabeth, elder daughter of Mrs. Thomas Henry Barber and the late William John Macpherson, of Kincardine, Ontario, to Duncan Hodd MacNicol, of Stratford, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacNicol, Prohshier, Saskatchewan. The marriage will take place quietly August 15.

The hot days of summer is the time that calls for close attention if the stock is to be kept free from external parasites. Body Lice—If the surroundings are kept in a clean, sanitary condition and a dust bath is provided, not much trouble will be occasioned with body lice so long as the birds are in good health, but let any bird get out of condition and it becomes a veritable propagating place for lice. These lice, however, are no great menace as they may be readily controlled. There are numerous lice powders on the market, any one of which will get good results. Ordinary fine road dust with a little flour of sulphur added, about a quart of a pound of sulphur to a quart of road dust, will be found to give satisfactory results when carefully dusted through the feathers. Blue ointment, a piece about the size of a small pea rubbed below the vent and underneath the wings, will also prove efficacious but the latter should not be used on setting hens. The most convenient remedy, however, that has been tried out at the Central Experimental Farm is Black Leaf 40, which can be purchased from any seed merchant. Paint the sides of the roosts immediately before the birds go to roost and the fumes will effectively rid the birds of all vermin.

Mites—Mites are a much more serious menace to the poultryman's profits as they are much harder to get rid of than the body lice, but here again cleanliness is absolutely essential if the pest is to be successfully coped with.

When mites are found to be present, the first step in banishing them is to give the house a thorough cleaning. Remove all droppings and old nesting material, scarp and sweep out every particle of dirt and burr it. Then if water pressure is available turn on the hose, forcing the water into every crack; if, as is the case on most farms, you cannot use this method, it is advisable to scrub down the walls with a brush or old broom, but in any case they should be thoroughly sprayed or painted with a good strong disinfectant. This wash should be repeated in a few days to destroy the mites, which hatch after the first application. The disinfectant may be applied with a hand sprayer, pump, or if one is not available, a brush will do, but in either case the fluid should be used liberally and every crack flooded.

A good strong solution of any of the coal tar disinfectants commonly offered for sale will prove effective. Ordinary coal oil will kill the mites, but as it evaporates quickly the effects are not lasting. An excellent "paint" to apply to the roosts and nestboxes is composed of one part crude carbolic or possibly better still Black Leaf 40, to three or four parts of crank case oil.

Even after the house has been cleaned, the cracks in the roosts and nest-boxes should be flooded at regular intervals throughout the summer either with the aforementioned "paint" or with coal oil.

For further information write to the Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, for Circular No. 80. George Robertson, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

SMUGGLING VEGETABLES INTO THE DIET

Barbara B. Brooks

Coaxing the various members of the family to eat vegetables is often a difficult task. Although one minute, young Johnny hears his mother say, "Eat your carrots, dear"—the next minute he sees his father surreptitiously push his share of the vegetable aside. It is then a question of how to get them to eat vegetables not to eat them—and usually his decision is in the negative.

If the same two vegetable abstainers mentioned in the above paragraph were given a stew with onions, carrots and potatoes in its savory juices they probably would eat it; or a spaghetti combination, rich with tomato sauce; or a meat pie with plenty of vegetables hidden under its crusty cover.

It is often through these combinations that people learn to eat certain foods which they think they dislike. We are giving here several recipes for smuggling vegetables into the diet.

CHOP BUEY

2 tablespoons fat
2 onions (sliced)
¼ pound pork (cut in small strips)
1 green pepper (shredded)
¼ cup mushrooms (sliced)
1 cup celery (shredded)
¼ cup rice
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups stock

Brown onions slightly in fat, add pork and cook until meat is seared. Add pepper, mushrooms and celery. Put in rice, salt and stock. Cook slowly until vegetables and meat are tender. Serve with white Kripiet, pouring the chop suey over them.

Yield: 6 servings.

STUFFED PEPPERS

1 cup cooked ham (ground)
1 cup cooked pork (ground)
1 cup Corn Flake crumbs
¼ teaspoon salt
Few grains pepper
1-3 cup tomato juice
6 green peppers

Mix ham, pork and Corn Flake crumbs. Moisten with tomato juice. Cut stem end from peppers and remove seeds. Parboil three minutes and fill peppers with stuffing, bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 30 minutes.

Yield: 6 servings.

Note: It is not necessary to have two kinds of meat for this recipe. Two cups of ham will make a delicious recipe.

CAMBRIOLE A LA BOUTIGEOISE

3 cups diced left-over pork
¼ cup chopped onion
1-3 cup fat
2 cups tomatoes
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt
½ bay leaf

1 cup sliced Kripiet
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
½ cup stuffed onions

Add meat and onion to fat and cook until onion is golden brown; add tomatoes, green pepper, pepper, salt and bay leaf. Let come to boil. Turn into casserole, cover with Kripiet and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 30 minutes. Remove from oven, sprinkle with parsley and garnish with olives cut in half, lengthwise.

Yield: 6 servings.

DRAINED BEEF

2 to 3 pounds brisket or round of beef
Drippings or other fat for sauteing
2 tablespoons butter or other fat
1 chopped onion
1 chopped carrot
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ cup diced celery
1 cup canned tomatoes
Salt and paprika

Put the meat into cubes; brown in hot frying-pan with drippings. Stir the meat so it will cook quickly and not lose its juices. Tender cuts can be cooked whole. Remove the pieces to a closely covered kettle that can be used either on top of the range or in the oven. Rinse the pan with a quarter cup of boiling water to save all browned bits, and pour the water over the meat. Cover lightly and cook slowly for two hours.

For the sauce, melt butter or other fat and brown the onion and carrot in it. Add parsley, celery and tomatoes. Heat thoroughly. Add seasonings. Pour the sauce over the meat and continue cooking for another hour.

Yield: 6 servings.

PLANT GOOD SEEDS PROPERLY

The amateur gardener who remembers these four words will avoid many of the pitfalls into which beginners are likely to fall.

There is no more prolific source of failure among amateurs than hasty, careless or improper sowing of the seed. A dry seed may retain its vitality for years, but after germination has commenced a check of a day or two in the process may prove fatal. There is no time in the life of a plant when it is so susceptible of injury from too much or too little heat and moisture as at the period between the commencement of germination and the formation of the first true leaves.

Enthusiastic gardeners are choosing the proper seed from the store around the corner. But when they plant this seed they should be sure it has a constant proper degree of moisture, a proper degree of heat, that it is covered with the proper thickness of earth and that the soil is such that the young stem can penetrate it and the young roots find food.

The soil should always be moist, never wet. To secure this cover the seed as freely as possible with well pulverized, freshly prepared earth, pressing it firmly over the seed. A small board may be placed upon the row and walked upon, or the back of the hoe used—but the directions should be followed in some way, if you wish to start your seedlings properly.

Letters to the Editor

Mr. Editor:

We have secured some very valuable information for your readers regarding the economic depression and crop conditions of Western Canada from Mr. W. H. Black and his wife, who are holidaying with their son, "to eat vegetables not to eat them," and usually his decision is in the negative.

Three thousand, one hundred miles from Grand Prairie, in the Peace River district, Northern Alberta. Crops are good there. Oats and wheat are the principal crops grown. It is not unusual for oats to yield one hundred bushels per acre. The price for the past six months has been twelve cents a bushel for oats and thirty cents for wheat. Hatzfeld is more plentiful than in Southern Alberta.

From Saskatchewan, Saskatchewan, for five hundred miles south, across southern Saskatchewan, and most of North Dakota crops are very poor or an absolute failure due to drought. Land in Saskatchewan around Moose Jaw, formerly worth one hundred dollars per acre, is in some cases being abandoned. The main highways of the west are being travelled rapidly and are generally good. The absence of so many starting brilliant signs along the highways in Ontario is very restful to any motorist who has travelled across a part of U. S. A. The most majestic sight of the whole trip is easily the Peace River at Dunsagan. The lowering banks on either side, seven hundred feet in height, give one a thrill. This river is many times larger than is commonly realized. It is 600 yards wide at Dunsagan, and 18 to 20 feet deep, with a swift, swirling current. It is one of Canada's most noble rivers and is fed mainly by snow from the Rockies. The Peace River, which winds an Ontario visitor of home, because it is largely a rolling plain, one distinct difference being the absence of the tall pine and maple trees which form so many attractive avenues along Ontario's rural roads.

One interesting feature of travelling in Northern Canada is the novel experience of travelling during the night by day-light. This was my most inviting picture of harmonious color. There is a settlement now in the Peace River district more than 600 miles north of the international boundary. Settlement is spreading north, east and west rapidly.

A Correspondent.

SHERLOCK AND "SIR SHERLOCK"

It is almost certain that no character in fiction created by an author of recent years has become so internationally familiar as Sherlock Holmes, the great detective. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in one of his last books, "Memories and Adventures," relates how, shortly after he had been knighted,—on account of quite another literary work,—he received a bill from a tradesman that was correct and businesslike in every detail save that it was made out to "Sir Sherlock Holmes."

"I hope I can stand a joke as well as my neighbors," records Sir Arthur, "but this particular piece of humor seemed rather missappiled, and I wrote sharply upon the subject. In response to my letter there arrived at my hotel a very repentant clerk, who expressed his sorrow at the incident, but kept on repeating the phrase, 'I assure you, sir, that it was bona fide!'"

"What do you mean by bona fide?" I asked.

"Well, sir," he replied, "my mates in the shop told me that you had been knighted, and that when a man has been knighted he changes his name, and that you had taken that one."

"I need not say that my annoyance vanished, and that I laughed as heartily as his pals were probably doing round the corner."

A party of French schoolboys visiting London told me the first of the slightest jokes that I have ever heard. They told me that they wished to show the Baker Street lodgings of the great Sherlock Holmes; but they could not be gratified, since Conan Doyle had always discreetly declined to identify the building. In South America Sherlock is so well known that a convenient new word, based upon his name, has been added to the language: it is his of official deduction are now rarely defined there as "sherlockholmitas."

Letters in praise of Sherlock Holmes or propounding problems for Sherlock Holmes creator to solve, reached him from the four corners of the world, including the Samoan Islands. Robert Louis Stevenson wrote to him from Vailima.

"He had been retelling some of my Sherlock Holmes yarns to his native servants—I should not have thought that he needed to draw upon anyone else,—and he complimented me in a comical letter of the difficulty of telling a story when you had to halt every moment to explain what a railway was, what an engineer was, and so forth. He got the story across in spite of all difficulties, and said he, 'If you could have seen the bright, feverish eyes of Elmita, you would have tasted glory!'"

Elmita and his comrades accepted all the tales as literally true; they could not be convinced that any story was merely a feat of fancy. But to many more sophisticated admirers the superdetektive is little less real—and certainly, if he is not true he ought to be!

ADJUSTING OVERHEAD

"We consider tipping a degrading custom and have formed a society to put a stop to it."

"Ay, I'll join it," said the man from Aberdeen, gladly.

"Good! The membership fee is only fifty cents a year."

"Mon, that's different. I'm thinkin' it'll be cheaper for me to tip."

LAST OF PROUD LINER

For more than 30 years one of the most popular vessels sailing between Liverpool and South America, the liner Orlia, 9,000 tons, belonging to the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, is to terminate her career in a fashion altogether novel, but burling her brilliant record of service. Instead of being handed over ingloriously to shipbreakers to be torn to pieces, she is to be allowed to end her own life. The Orlia is to be dashed at full speed on to the beach at Morecambe to break her up. Eventually she must fall into the hands of the scrap-dealers, but she will be able to make her exit splendidly. For a few days the Orlia has been lying in dock at Liverpool waiting for her last sailing orders. When they arrive she will leave with a skeleton crew on board for Morecambe Bay to meet her fate. It is expected that the shock of running ashore at her greatest speed will do great damage to the hull.

CURE IS IMPOSSIBLE

Warner—Yes, ten doctors have given her up.

Wilder—Poor woman! What's the matter with her?

Warner—She simply wouldn't pay her doctor bills.

TURN ON THE HOT AIR

Diner (after glancing at the check)—"There is a beauty parlor next door, isn't there?"

Waiter—"A lady runs a place for reducing figures, sir."

Diner—"Then I'd be obliged to you if you'd have her work on this dinner check before I pay it."

NO SIGNS

Mr. Bour—"Yes, I don't know how it is, but I feel thoroughly wound up tonight."

Hostess—"Really? And yet you don't seem to go?"

DOLLAR DOWN DANDIES

This country is filled with dollar down dandies—people who are buying a radio, an automobile, an electric refrigerator, and a dozen other things at "a dollar down and a dollar when the collector catches them in."

Let us be thankful that some enterprising Indian Prince does not think of selling his surplus elephants here on the "dollar down" plan. Think of trying to sell an unemployment apple to a fair lady accompanied by her pet elephant.
