Mr. and Mrs. Nell McDonald, 313 Cromwell Street, London, announce the engagement of their elder daughter, Hazel Luella, to Mr. Andrew Gilbert Griffin, London, second son of Mr. Nivine and the late Mrs. Grievs, Hilderston, Ontario, marriage to take place the latter part of September.

1931 Acton Fair Maintains Reputation

Hillsburg, with 52 points; and Rice and Akina, of Ospringe, with 27 points. There wasn't an entry from among the Acton players this year, and the local coaches offer as an excuse the alibi that the experts here have taken to euchre and are urging a euchre tournament for next year. The parade of prize winning cattle around the ring in front of the grandstand during the afternoon was a feature that was noteworthy and gave everyone a chance to view the best of the cattle exhibit. As for those who still had energy to expend, the dance in the Town Hall in the evening gave a good finish to the Fair Outing. There was a very fair crowd here again but not up to last year's record. The Harmony Serenaders provided the music. The prize winners in the field classes and complete details of Acton's 1931 Fair will be given in the next week's of The Free Press.

A Charming Exposition of Authentic Fall and Winter Modes—Delightfully New, Paramount in Style, Pleasingly Priced

COATS stress the new trend—"Surface Interest"—by using rough, spongy weaves such as chonga, boucle, nubbed tweeds and diagonals, with occasionally a smooth broadcloth for variation. Plastron shawl and lei collars of fine furs, new sleeves, new silhouette lines and the trim 3-button closing are other distinctive features of 1931 Coats. DRESSES divide their honors among satins, velvets, dull crepes and light woollens. Among the satins one sees much of that ever-smart combination of black with white. Velvets, developed in the newest modes, are more graciously feminine than ever. And the new woollens have simply excelled themselves—in beauty of weaves, texture, finish and coloring—they're admirably suited for Fall street and business dresses.

HATS have staged a decided revolution this season. Among the newest phases are—the little feather wreathed hat of the Empress Eugenie, worn coquettishly over one eye, the low-crowned Derby, the Glangarry cap, the folded turban of the French Colonial style, the minute tricorne and hosts of others—and though they have in common the forward dip, so varied are the shapes that among them every woman can find a becoming hat. ACCESSORIES have a spotlight position this season—accenting the style points of your costume. Handbags—in a host of clever variations—hose in new fall shades—gloves in the smartest lengths and styles—neckwear so flatteringly feminine—jewelry, too, a picturesque part of the ensemble. We're particularly proud of our accessory displays—don't fail to inspect them!

HANDICAPPED

Many young people feel that they are disqualified for success in life by certain defects. A boy who stammers and a girl who is slightly lame are likely to exaggerate these comparative trifles into insuperable handicaps. Henry Ford has given some very valuable information about the matter of handicaps. He believes that in a large manufacturing plant like his own, there is plenty of work that can be done by people—partially incapacitated. As a consequence, he has among his employees men who have lost an arm or a leg—one worker has lost both arms—blind men, deaf-and-dumb men and others with minor impediments. These not only do their work as well as their able-bodied mates, but often better. Even convalescents in the hospital, men able to sit up, have been allowed to do easy work, like screwing nuts on small bolts, and not only were they eager to do it, but their production was about twenty per cent. above the usual factory production. The real handicap, you see, is your own thought that you are handicapped. If blind men, one-armed men, and deaf-and-dumb men can hold their own with their able-bodied mates, why can't you? Your handicap is not likely to be more serious than these, but whatever it is, it is not serious unless you think so.

TRY THE DRUG STORE

Young Lady Motorist—"It's snowing and sleeting, and I'd like to buy some chains for my tires." "I'm sorry—we keep only groceries." "How snowing is it?" "I understand this was a chain store."

DOMESTIC CENSOR

Teacher who has found Tommy out before—"Did your father write this essay on 'Why I love teacher'?" Tommy—"No, he didn't; mother stopped him."

THE REAL REASON

Daughter—"But, daddy, why do you object to my becoming engaged? Is it because of my youth?" Father—"Yes, he's hopeless."

WHEELS WITHIN WHEELS

Algernon: "Fawcety, this Percy. A chap here thinks a football coach has four wheels." Percy: "Haw, haw! And how many wheels has the jolly old thing?"

"ALL FUN"

A government official whose services have been unusually valuable to his countrymen, was warned by his physician that he was overworking. With a chuckle he protested that a man could not work too hard when he enjoyed that which he was doing. "To me this is fun," he said. "It's a great game." Without taking sides against the doctor so far as the question of overworking is concerned, there is something cheering in such a point of view. One of the hardest working men in America says of his work: "This is fun. It's a great game." Such a person is to be envied no matter how many hours he works a day. It is all fun, all so intensely interesting that it seems absurd to him to talk of overworking. "There is much, of course, in picking out the right job, the one for which you are fitted temperamentally and by training. Unless your work is very exceptional, however, you can become interested in it, by putting enough of yourself into it. It is worth the effort. How different life would seem if you did not have to wait until dinner time for your fun to begin, if from the time you started to your work until you left, it was all "a great game."

THE REAL THING

Visitor—"Is this village lighted by electricity?" Villager—"Only when there's a thunder-storm."

HUMOROUS

"The man who goes about wishing he'd never been born is not the only one who regrets it."

CORRECT AGAIN!

"Is the world round?" a school ma'am asked. "No, ma'am." "It isn't, eh? Is it flat, then?" "No, ma'am."

CHEF-PROOF CHOW

Head Waiter—"Would monsieur prefer Spanish, French, or Italian cooking?" Customer—"I don't mind—I want a boiled egg."
