COST OF REARING BROILERS.

-With-the prevailing-low-prices of-feedsthere is the prospect of a fair margin of profit for market poultry and the ou look for the spring broiler trade appears to be promising.

All male chicks from the early hatches that are not intended for breeding stock Local Agent-GEO. C. BROWN, Norval-Phone Georgetown 382r21 should be separated from the pullets as soon as the sex can be determined. If intended for good and profitable broilers they should not be neglected. The young male needs the same careful attention and good feeding in its early development as the prospective laying pullet. Any neglect at the start will result in a stunted and unprofitable bird.

The young males intended for market as broilers require a good "starter" feed for the first six weeks, insuring a welldeveloped frame and a constitution that will stand the last two or three weeks' necessary heavy feeding to finish the broiler for the top grade. Sturdy healthy males of the heavy breeds should weigh about one pound each at six weeks and may then be worked onto a developing and firishing ration consisting of three parts ground corn, two parts middlings, one part ground oats (without hulls) and ten per cent, meat scraps, plus all the week with her sister, Mrs. J. Campbell, sour skimmed milk they will drink and an abundance of green feed. If available, green alfalfa is the best. The brothers may be crate fed for last week, but will "finish" well if confined to small grass pens. At this stage a maist mash should be fed twice daily. The proportion of ground corn in the ration should be gradually increased to two-thirds of the whole moistened mash with sour skimmed milk or buttermilk. No whole grain should be fed. Five to six pounds of grain plus milk and green feed will produce a two-pound broiler.

Fifty per cent. or over of the early hatches are males. Usually there is a good demand at a fair price for the early product if carefully prepared. There is always a g'ut of the late hatched. The cost of eggs and incubation has been incurred in producing the pullet. Turn the surplus males to the best ad-
