THE DANGER OF INDECISION

Some of you young people mistake indecision for deliberation. You think you are making up your mind, when you are simply bouncing an idea up and down as-children play with rubber balls. It is ridiculous to decide an important question on the impulse of the moment. You should give it your best thought, weighing pros and cons, but nothing is gained by the dillydallying methods which merely postpone decision. yet universal, of educational institutions known as the Frontier College. There is no other similar agency in the world There are something like 25,000 students enrolled, yet it has no buildings nor campus. It is more than twenty-five years old, nondenominational, and it is supported by grants from some of the provincial governments. Classes are held at night in box cars in barns, in shantles, and in lumber camps. In the twenty-five years the Frontier College has been serving the people, its classes have been held in more than 1,100 communities and many of its students are now listed among the leadets of Canada.

The students are mainly foreigners-Slavs, Italians, Scandinavians, Frenchmen, Orientals those who can speak and understand very little English when they reach the country and who depend upon the Frontier College for their first upward step. Often it is necessary for the instructors to win the confidence of the students before they are able-to help them much, for many of them are very suspicious and distrustful. Once they have discovered that only the spirit of helpfulness reigns, they extend 100 per cent co-operation to their teachers. The teachers of the Frontier College number some sixty or seventy, most-of them graduates of Canadian universities. some have degrees from American colleges, a few from English, and few are still enrolled in college, doing this work between terms. Although they receive only nominal compensation, they labor diligently and face many difficulties. They go into the mines, the logging camps, the harvest fields, and into the factories under the most trying conditions; yet their enthusiasm never seems to dampen and their against him will never succeed, but the spirit is undaunted, even in face of the severest of difficulties.

English is taught; and the three R's, while talks are given on a wide variety of subjects, forestry, politics, economics, and allied subjects. The courses are largely elementary, but the foundation for solid intelligent citizenship is laid among the students. The Frontier College is considered not the least of Canada's important educational institutions
