It is not often that one who has been so very much one of us in every relationship, contemplating this step, will still remain in our midst. There is, therefore, a real joy in our minds and a little sadness in our hearts. These gatherings remind us of others who have gone from us and can no longer be with us. We wish to thank you for all the ways you have been so helpful in the church and Sunday school and girls' work and in everything. Only girls are sometimes spoiled and selfish, but we who know you, know that you always seemed to be thinking of others first. We cannot say too much of the many ways that your cheery smile and cheery words have put us all into better temper. Here this evening it is at work, with its good effect. We all join in bearing witness to your helpfulness and cheer. For that reason we all join in expressing our satisfaction that you are not leaving our church and community. Amid the sadness which change is bound to bring to some here, we have this great joy that you are not leaving. As a small mark of our sincere feelings of respect and love, we the members of this community, present you with this cabinet of silverware. Signed on behalf of all, MRS. J. P. Advertising Has Many Profits Copyright, 1932, By BRUCE B. BRISBER, Vice-President Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company

You will frequently see in big city papers a half-page advertisement featuring only one item, a woman's hat, for example. That advertisement may have cost $500, and you wonder how it pays for itself. Some women went in and bought that hat. There was a profit in that. Other women who went in didn't like that particular hat, but bought another. There was profit in that. Some bought no hat at all, but passed other counters where they saw other things which they bought. There was a profit in that. Of those who came there were some who had not been regular patrons but who will come back some day to buy something else. And there will be a profit in that over a long period of time. But the largest profit of all is from those who do not come in as a result of the hat advertisement at all. They are the many who, when they saw the advertisement, were reminded that the store sells the type of goods they like, and so they decide to shop in that store the next time they go to town. This latter group will outnumber all the other groups combined, perhaps as much as 50 to 1 or 100 to 1. Merchants who expect every ad in their local weekly to literally "pull its head off" should keep in mind that big city advertisers expect no such results. They depend on the steady pull of advertising to build always a larger group of buyers who will at least remember their store enough to come in. It is fine, but foolish, to expect quick miracles from advertising. But go into it, believing in its long pull results, and you will see results in a steadily growing list of customers.
