WINTER TREATMENT OF CORMS CONTROLS GLADIOLUS THRIPS

The Dominion Entomological Branch reports that during the winter months gladiolus corms can be very easily treated for gladiolus thrips, by means of naphthalene flakes. The method is simple and cheap and has given excellent results in experimental and commercial work. The corms are placed in paper bags, the correct amount of naphthalene sprinkled over them and after being closed are stored away at room temperature for a period of between 3 and 4 weeks. The flakes are used at the rate of 1 ounce to 100 corms. If the corms are stored in flats or shallow boxes, a paper covering tied on after the naphthalene is applied, will hold in the fumes sufficiently to give good control. Fumigation should not be carried on in tin or other tight containers as sweating and sprouting of the corms will result. When the correct time has elapsed, the naphthalene still remaining around the corms should be removed and the containers and room well aired. Care must be taken to guard treated corms against reinfestation. They should be stored, after fumigation, only in clean, thrips-free, cellars or rooms.

Live with the wolves, and you will learn to howl.—Spanish proverb.

THE COST OF LIQUOR

To the Editor of THE ACTON FREE PRESS

Dear Sir:

In reference to letters to The Globe of recent date, on Spending on Liquor, and Cost of Liquor, let us look at another side of the situation, and consider the cost in manhood, which cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents.

When a person indulges in a few drinks and endeavors to drive an automobile, he becomes a good illustration of the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde type of man. Who then wants to run the risk of being the victim of such a potential murderer? When such people stoop so low as to befuddle their minds through drink, what is the result? They are an asset to the liquor forces and a liability to the general public.

Such class of people deserve severe punishment, their driving permits cancelled for two or three years, and a stiff term behind jail or reformatory doors.

What about the ones who are at the head of our Governmental affairs? If any of them own autos, would they tolerate the idea of engaging drivers who are slaves to strong drink? Would they tolerate the idea of riding on railway trains with crews who take a glass or two too many?

What manufacturer or employer would tolerate the idea of any employee working around intricate machinery while under the influence of liquor? What about homes being broken up through the bread-winner spending the available cash for a few drinks and finds himself spending a term in jail, and other members of his family left to shift for themselves? If those who meddle with the vile stuff take time to do so, let them take time to suffer the consequences.

If we do not want to put up with the results of strong drink, it is up to all right thinking individuals to bestir themselves to the utmost limit, devoting time, efforts and energy to put down the curse of strong drink.

May Divine aid be given to all W. C. T. U. organizations to prosecute as far as possible in checking the evils of the liquor traffic.

One Interested in the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic.

MONEY IN YOUR POCKET

It is said of some young people that their money burns a hole in their pockets. Whenever they get hold of a dollar, they immediately lay plans for spending it. They resolve that they will begin to save when they are given their next raise, or when they have finished paying for something they consider necessary to their happiness. Before the raise comes, however, their desires multiply. Such people are frequently popular, but seldom prosperous.

Thrift, of course, includes wise spending as well as saving. The young people who cannot be comfortable while there are a few extra dollars in their pockets, however, are not on the way to any real success.

NEWS!

A woman called at a studio for a sitting. The photographer made two negatives and promised proofs for the following day.

The next day her husband called for the proofs, but the photographer showed him only one. The husband said: "My understanding was that there were to be two proofs."

"I did make two sittings of your wife," replied the photographer, "but in one she held her lips apart and showed the end of her tongue."

"My goodness," gasped the husband, "let me see that one. I didn't know there was an end to it."
