should be built of rough lumber. The hog does not require an expensive home. Not only that, but best results are actually obtained from the cheaper equipment. Two or three cabins, a box stall for the farrowing sow, will supply the necessary housing in the case of the farmer who grows a few hogs. More specialized hog raising necessitates the box more expensive piggery. Experience has shown-that healthy, vigorous litters may be obtained from breeding stock housed outdoors during the winter, and that small, weak litters frequently result when parents are housed in so-called Miss Gertrude Mann left on Thursday comfort. Further, rheumatism and cripling are rarely, if ever, found in the "out-door" pig. PIG FEED MIXTURES

Growing and Fattening Rations for Use in Eastern Canada

In making up feed mixtures for pigs. t is always important to determine the available supply and the prices of the various feeds suitable for the age of the animals being fed. From time to time feeds differ in relative price, and thus one or another feed may be used more advantageously in compounding a mixture. The following mixtures for pigs have been used successfully by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, but, at the same time, in certain sections prices may be divergent enough to warrant a change in the proportions of the
