WAR AND THE LORD'S PRAYER

In his patriotic novel, "The Deluge," Henry Stenkiewicz, the famous Polish author, introduces a character of whom it is said that he knows war as well as he knows the Lord's Prayer. This means to say, of course, that the gentleman referred to is a good soldier, for if he knows war as well as he knows the Lord's Prayer, he knows it very well. Who, in Christendom does not know the Lord's Prayer? Rouse a man from his sleep and ask him to say the Lord's Prayer and he will recite it without a mistake. Hold up a man on a dark road and demand the Lord's Prayer of him, and he will respond without a pause. I think anybody would be ashamed to admit that he did not know the Lord's Prayer. So well is it known. "But do we know it?" Some day, take a half hour from your leisure routine and try to ponder the meaning of each petition in that prayer. You will spend thirty minutes more profitably, and you are likely to exclaim, "Why, I never knew the Lord's Prayer." How thoughtlessly we pray. I believe we often use the Lord's name in vain when we say the Lord's Prayer. And if the Polish nobleman knew war no better than some people know the Lord's Prayer, then he knew nothing more than the mechanics of warfare. But war is more than just weapons and strategy and the thrill of the fight. If he knew war as we ought to know the Lord's Prayer, he knew of man's selfishness and greed that cause blood conflicts, together with the long trail of suffering they entail. To know the Lord's Prayer thoroughly is to love it; to know war thoroughly is to hate it.

INSPIRING COMPANIONS

A most erroneous belief is that dullness is inevitably associated with goodness; that interesting people are without moral standards; and that wit and conscientiousness are never found in the same individual. Neither the good nor the bad have a monopoly on charm or intelligence, but the advantage is, of necessity, with those who are upright. Really intelligent people are pretty sure to practice self-control. Those who are the slaves of their impulses lack intelligence as well as character. Wit is more likely to be the product of a clear brain than of one confused by alcohol or tired by late hours. Only very silly people find dissipated lives more interesting than those which have been devoted to solving real problems. The really inspiring companions are those who have achieved self-mastery, whose lives are shaped by high ideals.

Truth is the breaking through into Time of Eternity.

MAKING A ROSE BED

In order to make a good bed for roses where the soil is not naturally deep and where there is poor drainage, first remove the good soil from the surface, then remove the lower soil so that about two feet in depth of soil is removed altogether. Then, if the soil needs drainage, lay three-inch tile on the bottom with sufficient fall to carry the surplus water away, having, of course, some outlet for it. If this tile drainage is not practicable, some gravel or small stones below the two feet of soil will help the drainage. Put good surface soil, preferably with some clay in it, on the bottom, spread a heavy coat of rotted manure on it, and dig it in. Then put back the surface soil which had been removed from the bed, or better soil if it is poor, and again dig manure into it. This, says Dr. Macoun, the Dominion Horticulturist, should make a good bed for roses.
