Next to that came the Methodist Church in which for many years she was a Sunday School teacher, later President of the Ladies' Aid Society and active for years in the Women's Missionary Society. For the last ten years she has been invalided in her home, where she has had her pleasure in hearing of the lives of her children. While unable to get about in recent years, she has occupied many of her hours in knitting endless pairs of mitts and other items, which have been passed on to missionary boxes as well as to needy folk in the community. This in addition to myriad socks knitted at the time of the Great War. Ten days or so ago pravious to her passing she developed unusual weakness and from this gradually sank into her last long rest. Pve children were given to the home, Miss Clara, who, devotedly nursed her mother through her invalidism; C. H. and John, of Dundas; Arthur and Mrs. Prederick Punk, of Binghamton, N.Y. The private funeral service on Saturday afternoon was conducted in the home by Mrs. Moore's pastor, Rev. Dr. Morrow, and was attended by members of the family and relatives from Acton and from various other places. And then the aged mother was laid to rest beside her husband in the family plot in Pairview Cemetery.
