Dear Page Pages: Mention was made in a recent lette of meeting a lady, a childhood acquaintance of Rev. C. W. Gordon-Ralph Connor-and the interest that this involved Accompanying the lady of the Manse one of the homes of the charge, we found that this lady, in this case, was from Prince Edward Island, and knew well Miss L. M. Montgomery, whose "Anne of Green Gables," and many other books are so widely read. In fact, the clergyman, whom the authorem married was such a close neighbor and intimate friend, that he quietly walked into the home one-day and announced her coming marriage. As you know, this couple lived at Norval, Ontario, for years, but now reside in Toronto. Our informant and her husband have been many years here amongst "the wells." Thus, in this western country, there are so many contacts with persons one has known or known of, "down east" A company of young folks were in the introduced to one of them, a young man, his surname suggested the memory of the name of a distinguished Toronto lawyer, with a very peculiar first name, and casually mentioning the fact, he remarked that there might be some to relationship, for that peculiar first name was in later years among his own folks.

There is in this country an institution known far and wide, for while 3 originating in Ontario and most known therein-yet probably in every province. and certainly "across the line," there are those who share in its dividends of benefits. Based on last available statistics, there must be about five thousand. Now, as an exercise in lexiography, and to show the wonderful possibilities of transportation and transformation in our English alphabet, will you consider our subject with this in view. It is known by means of fourteen letters, five vowels and nine consonants. But these fourteen all occur within the first twenty of the alphabet. Of the vowels there are only three individuals, I for two are each used once, and one thrice. Of the nine consonants, there are two which are each once repeated, the other seven are used singly. The 'repeaters' happen to be in close juxtaposition in the alphabet. This hodge podge of characters migh of course produce many varied constructions, in the present case, properly assembled they designate an edifice, attractive, useful - eminently so - and h evidently permanent. At any rate, it has been in existence one-half, plus onetenth, plus one-fiftieth of a century, and is still rated as healthy.

AMATEUR PROGRAM SPONSORED BY DUBLIN LITERARY

The regular meeting of the Dublin Literary Society was held at the school on Priday, December 10th, in the form of an amateur program. The meeting was brought to order by the Vice-President; Alex: Waldie. The minutes of the last meeting were given and business was discussed, after which Alex Waldle acted as "Major Bowes" for the program, with Bill Carnathan as station

The program opened with the theme song, "My Wild Irish Rose," with Mrs. O. Robertson at the plane. The first item on the program was a piano solo, by Margaret Somerville, followed with a solo, "Harbor Lights," by Verna Webster. A history of Dublin School was given by Prances Mullin, followed with mouth organ selection by Annie Kelly, and a guitar selection by Roy

Major Bowes then gave a list of last year's amateur contestants and the prize winners, after which Margaret and Jean Robertson delighted the audience with a number. The first issue of the literary paper, entitled "The Rocky Roadster." was given by Shiela Breen, after which Annie Black gave an interesting list of the teachers of Dublin School from 1854 to 1937. Mrs. Robertson and Miss Young favored the audience with a piano duett. followed with a solo by Wilda McGlaughlin. entitled "Lattle Old Lady"

Station announcement was given by Bill Carnathan, and Mrs Robertson played the theme song. A recitation was presented by Joan Somerville, followed with a plano solo by Margaret Robertson, and a reading by Gladys Mullin. Major Bowes then gave the announcements for the forthcoming week, after which the school children presented the concluding number a dialogue, entitled "Reading the News." The program ended by Mrs. Robertson at the piano playing the theme song "My Wild Irisin

Lunch was served in conclusion, and a social time spent. The prize winners for the evening were; for the seniors, Miss Young and Mrs. Robertson; while Annie Kelly received honorable metition Junior prize winners were Margaret and Jean Robertson: while Wilda McGlaughlin and Rachel Mullin received hancrable mention.
