BRITANNIA MAN SUCCUMBS TO INJURIES IN HOLD-UP

Victim of a masked bandit who shot him down in cold blood late Wednesday night, Gerrit Lammerse, 61-year-old service station owner, died in Peel Memorial Hospital, Brampton shortly after 5 p.m. Sunday. He was shot in the abdomen.

A blanket warrant for the arrest of the intruder on a murder charge was issued immediately by Crown Attorney A. G. Davis, who was kept constantly informed of the elderly man's condition. The crisis in the battle to save his life came Saturday afternoon. Following a slight improvement Friday, Lammerse suffered a relapse Saturday afternoon and when it became apparent that death was close, Mrs. Lammerse was hastily notified by hospital officials.

Although no definite announcement has been made, authorities stated that both an autopsy and an inquest would probably be held.

GLOVES FOR KITCHEN WORK

It is not every woman who finds rubber gloves unimpaired at kitchen blessings, and most women think more than once before putting them on for any half-minute task. Or rather they remember the time and trouble involved in the taking of them off again, and accordingly do not bother to put them on, save when their hands need protection of some duration. But they are unwise, because kitchen tasks take their toll of soft and

A QUOTATION FROM "THE" BOOK EASTER PUZZLE POEM

My first is always in the heavens,
As also is my nest;
My third is in the firmament,
My fourth in verse, not text.
My fifth is in this troubled earth,
My sixth helps to provide us mirth;
My seventh in rise and in ascend,
My eighth not in twist, but always in bend.
My last in mind, but not in thought,
My whole has many a comfort brought.

GASOLINE TERMED LIQUID DYNAMITE BY SAFETY GROUP

"Liquid dynamite" would be a more suitable label for gasoline when used as a cleaning agent, according to a warning issued to-day by the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations. Because gasoline is highly inflammable, the warning points out, the great importance of not allowing even a little gasoline to be exposed in a room or other confined space cannot be too strongly emphasized. Gasoline vapor is three to four times heavier than air, and consequently cannot disappear into the upper air as many other gases do; the vapor will flow along for considerable distances near the ground, spreading the field of potential danger.

Science has provided a reliable method of detecting the dangerous presence of gasoline fumes in a "combustible gas indicator," and the association recommends use of this instrument whenever gasoline is used, particularly in industry. Tests have shown the nose cannot be trusted to detect the danger, and this fact is emphasized by numerous fatalities.

Blindness and eye injuries can be reduced 90 per cent. by wearing of suitable goggles at certain types of work where a hazard is present, according to the report of an eye specialist who has recently completed a survey of eye injuries to industrial workers. "Just as it is industry's responsibility to provide safe working conditions for its employees," he maintains, "so must responsibility be accepted for the enforcement of reasonable rules for the use of goggles."

"No eyes will be saved from injury," R. B. Morley, general manager of the association, adds, "if the goggles, having been provided, are worn up on the forehead, carried in the pocket, or hung up on a nail."

"Don't let a handyman assume the role of a specialist and wield a match stick to remove a cinder from your eye," he warns. "Infection or loss of your eyesight can easily follow from such an amateur proceeding. If the eye has been wounded, cover it with a sterile dressing. If the eye has been burned with a chemical, flush it out with plenty of clean water."

The appointment of C. H. Kercher, Toronto, as director of the "Safety Exchange" was announced by the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations to be featured at the association's annual two-day convention in Windsor on April 21 and 22.

Prominent members in the exchange will be J. H. Vernon, Peterborough, speaking on the use of danger tags; E. G. Burgess, Toronto, discussing the advantages of premium plans; A. McMenamy, Hamilton, who will make suggestions on eye protection in industry; R. A. Clarke, Windsor, who will stress the importance of safeguarding machinery; and E. O. Morgan, Toronto, who will outline a new plan of competitive "good housekeeping" in plants and factories.

More than 1,500 delegates representing industrial firms in every city and scores of towns in Ontario will attend the exhibition in Windsor and will discuss the practical and intelligent approach to safety through accident prevention work.
