Boulder Bird Bath

A bird bath in a garden should be decorative as well as practical. On the other hand, the bird bath in a small garden does not want to be so ornamental as to "stick out like a sore thumb," as the saying goes. A bird bath should fit into and become an appropriate part of the surroundings.

As a general rule birds are more at home when the bird bath is near the ground. In such cases, however, be sure the planting about the container does not provide a lurking place for bird enemies.

Many annuals stop blooming if seeds form, and for that reason keep watch from now on to prevent this, especially in the case of sweet pea, nasturtium, snapdragons and others which form large seed pods.
