ANOTHER CHURCH CENTENARY AT NORVAL ON SUNDAY

Next Sunday Norval Presbyterian Church will observe its hundredth anniversary. Bervices of special interest to the occasion are planned for 11.00 a.m. and 7.30 p.m., Standard Time. It is recorded that services were first held in connection with Preser's Church in 1835; services were held in the homes of members until 1830, when a quarter acre of land was bought from James Mitchell for five shillings. The corner stone of the present building was laid in 1878 and the building opened for public worship on Februrary 23rd, 1879. The occasion on Sunday is one that will attract many friends from far and near back to join in the centenary services. ...

Mileic, even though enjoyed in the porth, is not taught in the schools like in the south. At least, not in our school, so the children miss taking part in the festivals. We also read with interest the Editor's article telling of his trip with the convention delegates to the notable mining towns of the north: Had I known, I might have met him at the market where the banquet was held. A visit of the kind he mentioned is far too limited to get a real conception of this great northland. But I feel sure he won't now be antisfied, but will come back by automobeauty; try fishing in some of the streams and lakes; and see farming as it is carried on in the country proper. Even though the railway cuts through the great clay belt, from south to north.

The north needs rain. We have had a few nice showers, but the ground is very dry and needs a good soaking. Crops are all planted, but are not as far on for the time of year as might be expected.

We entertained friends from Palermo two weeks ago, and at that time they had berries almost ready to pick; hay almost ready to cut; and wheat beginning to head out; while here grain is just nicely up, potatoes just peeking through and berries just in blossom. But if sufficient moisture comes growth will be rapid, so we're hoping for the best. Road work has commenced in earnest. The construction company have a flect of trucks at work, steam shovels, ditchers, graders, etc., and they commenced this week to run two shifts of 10 hours. so will be going night and day. Some hundreds of men will be employed to man the two shifts, so conditions generally will improve, as well as roads. Respectfully yours.
