three weeks. I find it difficult to do i every week just now, when it's such busy time. When one is able to do and willing, there seems more to do that gets done, and writing letters is one of the tasks that is so easy to put off, but on my recent visit, I was repeatedly told that my letters were looked for, so must not disappoint.

Pairs have been, and still are, the order of the day, and are a great place for folk to meet their friends, see the best that is produced and generally enjoy a great day. Acton has once again had a great Fair. I enjoyed reading all about it, even to the Baby Show, seeing who won the prizes, and generally keeping in touch. Our wee lad was favored once with a first prize at Acton Pair so it's nice to see pictures which have become such a prominent feature, showing who are still raising the first prize

Reading of the Historical Exhibit rewere we closer, might have been included, and if possible to send it, will be next year. It happens to be a picture, made by hand, and is both named and dated by the maker, over 66 years ago, so I'm sure would be interesting.

The locality in which we live has no large fair, but the School Fair takes its place, and was largely attended this year, held in Thornloe, at the church shed, for exhibits, and Public School grounds, for sports. That particular day, between the time of going to the fair and coming home the road contractors became real busy right at the railway crossing in the village, and everyone west was detoured three miles jout of their way to get home. The past month has seen tren endous changes in road construction. The new road is now open for traffic right through from New Liskeard to Heaslip corner, except for a short stri through Earlton village, which is paved Paving is completed 6 miles north of Earlton, and 9 miles north of Liskeard, and the new strip is in excellent shape. although not paved. The strip from the highway west, down through Thornloe, is all ready for paving. Culverts are all finished, fills are in, both sides have been ditched and under-drained with tile, and the grading is done and rock surface applied North of Englehart a tremendous program is going on, and when completed will be an entirely new road, with dozens of the curves and hills eliminated Those who have driven this stretch of about 40 miles, will remember some of the curves and at least one hill, known as
