On Sunday last the Cedarvale Sunday School presented Mr. Burt James with a beautiful book and the following address, which was read by Miss Doris Pines:

Cedarvale, November 20th, 1938

Dear Friend and Co-Worker:

It is indeed with no small regret we look forward to the time when you shall part from us, to go home to your native land and your kin-folks.

Some of the regret that we have at your leaving is covered by the realization of the joy that will be yours and your relations when you meet again.

We know that the greatest joy you could bring back to your mother is not gold, or a lofty position, but a reputation for plowing a straight furrow, both on the farm and in the realm of the spiritual.

We have often remarked among ourselves at your splendid faithfulness in helping Cedarvale Sunday school both by your presence and by your assistance in the winter and we feel sure we will miss both this winter. However, as a Sunday school we rejoice that you will carry with you a share to come back to the place of our happy fellowship around the things of the Lord.

We of course cannot tell what day you will return. It is because of this that the scripture admonishes us that "today is the day of salvation." We can never be sure of tomorrow. We feel sure that you will find great changes in conditions on the other side of the water. We do hope and pray that you will find your folks well and rejoicing in salvation, but you will see, as you see here, great changes in the international outlook and in the spiritual outlook of the people. You may even see new hearts falling from fear and for looking on those things which are coming on the earth. But we pray that you will give a good witness for the Lord, who did for you. May we say with Paul, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ," for it is the power of God unto salvation to those who believe.
