The New Policy Voluntary recruiting for the N.P.A.M. as distinct from the C.A.S.F., will be suspended on August 15th for the time

Provision will be made to bring into the nillitia the men who are to be called for training duty and service in Canada under the National Resources Mobilization Act. The men thus recruited will be brought directly into the militia regiments throughout the country.

These men will or called for 30 days training, beginning, it is expected, about October 1st, 1940, in groups of approximately 30,000 men per month. Single men in the lower age categories will be called first. It is unlikely that married men will be called during the first year.

In one year, therefore, approximately 300,000 men will have received initial training. These 300,000 men are to be regarded as the vanguard of a mighty Canadian Army which will be available to defend this country.

There are difficulties in withdrawing so many men from the normal life of the community even for the comperatively short period of training but difficulties be reached. This is the beginning, not the end, of a policy. The plan has been of the bride received, wearing a white worked out so that it can be speeded-up or slowed down as events require.

There are difficulties, also, in building quarters and manufacturing the equipment for this citizen army. Every effort is being made to guard against failure on either count.

One of the difficulties of the scheme is the shortage of competent instructors to train these men. Several thousand instructors will be needed. The problem has been foreseen and some schools have already been established. The instructors are being drawn from N.P.A.M. units: and ex-service men.

This policy has been evolved to cause the minimum dislocation to industry. The rule will be that there can be no exemptions. Any postponements must be so arranged that everyone within the groups called who is physically fit must undergo training within a year. Physical fitness is defined as everyone classified by military medical standards as being C1 or

No distinction of any kind will be made between the new recruits, thus drafted, and the rest of the militia-except that the men called under this plan will not be available for duty outside of Canada unless they volunteer for such service It is important that from the outset these men be regarded as members of the Canadian army. As recruits they will pass directly, into the militia regiments Automatically they will become members of the Canadian militia in their own Gibson were the ushers. right. They will share its traditions and be the custodians of its honor.

Thirty Days' Training It may be thought that 30 days is too brief a period in which to train men. It is a brief period. But the weight of opinion is that we must lay as broad and as deep a foundaton as possible for the Canadian army. To withdraw 300,000 men-from their work for more than 30 days over a year might jeopardize production of essential war commodities. It is necessary to give the largest number of men elementary military training in the shortest possible time.

No Discrimination It is imperative that no distincton be drawn between the men called for training and the other men in the Canadian militia. They are-to-be welcomed into the Canadian army and they have every right to feel that their country honors (Continued on Page Eight)

Rosedale Group Raise $11.75 for Red Cross Purposes

Another example of how even the chil can help in this war effort was shown when a group of children from the Young and Wellington Street section -raised, on Saturday, $11.75 and turned the amount over to the local Red Cross Society. Incidentally they had a lot of fur in the doing of the thing, too. The group held the event on the front lawn at ex-Reeve McCutcheon's home It was right on the highway and an excellent location. There was baking. emonade, soft drinks; Bingo, a fish pond

In making the building ready for occupancy, the Beardmore Co must spend $20,000° to $30,000 The new company would invest half a million in capital and employ about 100 persons. moving of this plant from the British Isles had the support of the Dominion Government It would be a stuple industry in peace time as well as war time Mr Beatty expressed appreciation of the helpfulness of Council in securing the applications for positions in the new industry. The housing problem was a serious one-but it was felt could be over-

The particular need of completing negotiations for this factory coming here and the only expenditure in which the Municipality would be involved was providing suitable access to the plant. This could be done by making Frederick Street bassable for cars and trucks and pedes-

The Beardmore Co. also felt that since all their property in this section was disposed of to other interests, they had no further interest to maintain the Maria Street bridge. If Frederick Street were opened up a road to the Crescent' could be constructed that would eliminate the need for this Maria Street entrance andwould be much safer and more convenient. With the expenditure being made ly, and I can announce that a command by the Beardmore Company in securing this new industry, it was felt that cooperation might be extended and the contentious bridge settled by the Mun-
