RECALL PREDICTION

To reach Berlin, the British aeroplanes had to fly several hundred miles over Axis territory in broad daylight. Why were they not annihilated en route by the German air force? Was not the whole world told, with the Germans nodding approval, that the German air force was so strong in numbers, so highly trained, so superbly equipped, that it would completely dominate Europe in the event of war, and could maintain this pre-eminence even against the joint production of the United States and the British countries? This information, whose word was not to be questioned, let's see—what was his name? Ah, yes—Lindbergh.—Winnipeg Free Press.

FARMERS UNION CHIEF

LONDON, (CP)—New president of the National Farmers' Union in Britain is Capt. J. Templeton of Radyr, Cardiff, Wales. His wife will manage his 200-acre farm in his absence.

Weekly War Commentary

Continuity continues to hold the ground gained. Reports Saturday said British planes were strafing enemy forces in the area. In northern Tunisia units of the British 1st Army were engaged in a continuous advance in force west of Bizerte.

For French Unity

Conferences in Algiers between Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Gen. Henri Girard and Gen. Georges Catroux are expected to crystallize shortly and with them the union of all Frenchmen fighting the Axis will be brought to a very close to realization.

Strategically it is possible to envisage a number of offensives of the British 1st Army from the Mediterranean coast towards the Tunisian coast. The German advance has been checked up and the Germans are trying to strengthen their position. Generally, however, the situation inside France is completely unaltered.

Weekly War Commentary

In a devastating air attack, R.A.F. and U.S.A.F. bombers dropped hundreds of tons of bombs on Berlin Saturday, returning again Monday night to hammer the German capital and the Baltic Valley. On Sunday night the great Allied bomber force of 24 bombers was the objective for a "heavy and concentrated" attack that left large fires raging.

In the few raids over Berlin 30 planes were reported lost while four failed to return from the attack on St. Nazaire. Twelve planes were reported missing after the Baltic Valley raid in which the front, rear and rear center of Berlin was one of the principal targets. Ten Canadian planes were lost in all operations.

The growing might of Allied air power used for shattering to Berliners who had been led to believe earlier in the war that the capital's air defences could not be mastered. With the Monday night raid attacks on Berlin came to 60. Retaliatory raids by the Luftwaffe on the British Isles early this week were made. One attack on a British merchant ship and two on a British merchant ship and a few enemy raiders were also reported over the East Anglian coast.

The climax to the heavy fighting about the Marethi Line and the attacks on the rear and the right flank of the Axis forces came Monday night when the British 1st Army struck on a wide front along the coastal corridor to northern Tunisia. A waiting dust storm helped the withdrawal through the Lemle Canal gap.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons Tuesday that the German attack on the coast was a "devastating" move and that the success of the British 1st Army's offensive was "undoubtedly" the turning point of the offensive had increased to 6,000.

Mr. Churchill warned once again against "underestimating the task which confronts the Allied forces in Tunisia," but he admitted his satisfaction with the progress made. As Hottel leads his men north in an effort to effect a junction with Axis forces at Bizerte and Tunis he has to deal with American and French troops waiting to the northwest, the Royal Navy controls the coastal waters and Allied air forces are blasting the roads which troops, tanks, guns and supplies must travel.

New gains in every sector of the Tunisian front were reported Wednesday. The 8th Army's pursuit of retreating Axis forces was reported to be progressing steadily and units have occupied Oudrej 12 miles north of Gabes. Metoula, a town eight miles north of Gabes, has also been taken.

In the central region, American forces are driving eastward from Gabes and violent fighting is reported a little to the north at Ouedkelt and Itad. In the extreme north, the British 1st Army has driven the Germans back 15 miles and recaptured Sedjenane. Capture of this town puts the 1st Army within 35 miles of Bizerte, the big Axis naval base.

Only that Mr. Tibbets is 84 years of age. Now and then he visits the roundhouse to keep in touch with the smitty.

Chronicles of...

Ginger Farm

Written Specially For The Acton Free Press By

GEORGE BROWN, Naval

The month's time almost disappeared and now there the snow had been, and the first yellow-green shoots of dandelion, law or three dandelion above the ground. Chartered buses are changing, and light in the sky and the sun is shining brightly on the first green summer with each succeeding day. But there is still a cold, raw wind and the first dandelion with the weather just yet. There is also a little mud here and there. I found that out to my window last week when I was fastening this district containing for the Red Cross.

The first day of the month I started and mostly about then and it was not long to know my way out of the road and the second day I easily thought all the longest lanes in the country were in my district. I would stop at the road and look of the lanes to drive or walk, that was the question. There were some where I could have driven but I know that I was not sure that the opportunity of a lane of road in the summer of what one may find of the other. So I played safe and walked—or if it might be more correct to say I walked along, avoiding my father's car at least once in every lane, for the road was at that time many days when it clung to the outside of a rubber tire than your shoe down to the inside.

However, worse things than that were suffered every day for the Red Cross to grandstanding about walking through a little mud would have seemed a very good thing on my part, especially when the mud of my own was particularly gratifying. No, I didn't wonder but did dear, was I ever tired?

Another day I was out of a group of kindhearted members parking their cars for me and that was another day that anyone would be glad to do. Friday and Saturday I stayed home and did my own work. And that, I found, was really a rest. In between whiles I had a little to do with a sick cow. At least she wasn't exactly sick except that she took a milk every now and again to show up like an over-inflated balloon. She has now recovered. Most of Father's time was spent by spare time I spent when he isn't doing chores in taken up digging ditches to let the water drain away from the buildings. There is more water than usual this year because of the snowbanks thawing a little every day.

I don't like the look of the trees and shrubs around here. Apparently the rabbits have been having a royal time of it. They seem to have made it possible for the rabbits to jump higher up the trees than usual, straggling the branches and generally enjoying themselves at the expense of the trees.

How is the state of your coal-bin—or your wood-pile, as the case may be? Are you wondering how and when you can get a coal-stove? If so it may well solve your problem. These bright sunny days it is possible to do with very little fire in the cookstove and yet you often have to open up the drafts to cook the meals. And that's where your oil-stove can help. Meat can be started and vegetables brought to the boil on the oil-stove and then removed to the kitchen where the fire will probably be enough heat to keep them cooking. At least that is what I find. Oil stoves, of course, to be both safe and satisfactory, must be kept clean, that is, the burners and pipeline. Some people realize this and some don't. Cleaning an oil-stove is a horrid job and one that I can put off with the greatest of ease. But last Friday the lack of our fuel supply made me take to the job in real earnest. And I really did make a job of it—and of myself too. It's a wonder someone didn't come to call before I was through. Generally it's the minister who arrives on the scene at such a time.

Well, they have started work on the Milton mine—at least there has been a lot of machinery and equipment travelling the road and there will be plenty of work to do setting it up before actual operations can begin. Local men have been called in to help with the job but as far as I can gather they cannot make much headway because of the mud. One of these times we will make a visit over there and when maybe I shall be able to tell you more.

GRAY COACH LINES

CHICKS? SURE! if..

YES—the Gray Hatcheries have chicks for sale, in spite of a deluge of orders. Not, perhaps, in the breed that's your first choice. Not, perhaps, in the Extra-Profit grade. But Gray Chicks of the usual high Gray quality.

Mind you, that's not saying that the breed and grade you want aren't available. Very probably they are. But demand is uneven. In some breeds it is so heavy that the Gray Hatcheries are booked ahead—in those breeds—for weeks. In others even last-minute orders can be filled, for both day-old and started chicks.

NAME YOUR SECOND CHOICE

So when you order your Gray Chicks, name your second choice—even your third choice, if possible... on breed, grade, and date of shipment. It may prevent delay and disappointment. All Gray breeds have the same backing of skill and care behind them, so you will probably be pleased with the results you get, even if the breed isn't the one you ordinarily order.
