First Essentials in Poultry Housing

In view of the fact that in the fall of the year when old poultry pens are being cleaned and new pens or houses are being planned for the new pullet crop, the consideration of the essentials in poultry housing is particularly pertinent. The essentials of a good poultry house are: location, floor width, insulation, ventilation, light type of house, size of pens, and grading, and equipment.

The location should be dry and well drained. The floor should be well raised off the ground. If made of cement, it should be placed on a foot or more of stone, gravel or cinders to prevent dampness. The width of the house should be at least 20 feet or more, depending on the size of the flock. Insulation insures warmth and comfort and is second only in importance to a dry floor. A cedar block wall or shavings dusted with slaked lime provide very effective insulation. When shavings are used they should be well packed.

With regard to ventilation, much controversy has occurred over the years as to different methods. General opinion seems to be centred on some form of wall ventilation either by means of adjustable windows or slot ventilators. The fact remains that the birds need air. Ventilation is only possible when there is a difference in temperature between the inside and outside. Ventilation is absolutely necessary to insure the difference.

Concerning light, there should be an abundance of it. In a deep house small windows in the bank of the pen are desirable. As to the type of the house it may be of one, two, three or more stories, depending upon the owner's preference and size of flock desired. Again the size of the flock may be up to several hundred birds. The controlling factor should be the number of birds planned of any one age or degree of maturity.

In rat-proofing, wire or metal flashings on all floor angles help greatly, and the equipment in general should be convenient, easily cleaned, and of a type suitable to the requirements of the birds. A good house insures comfort and contentment in the flock.

PIANO TUNERS IDENTITY

"When we arrived at the island of Misrah, where Capt. Kidd's fabulous treasure is supposed to have been buried, my piano, after all its many ups and downs and changes of attitude, was showing signs of going sadly out of tune. I was telling a young American officer about it. 'Gee,' he said, 'if I could get hold of a socket wrench from some aircraft guys, I might be able to tune your piano for you. This he did. He made such a good job of it I said to him, 'But surely you must have had something to do with pianos.' 'I guess so,' he said, 'perhaps you've heard of my family. My name is Steinway.'"

CALL FOR FARM BLOC

EDMONTON (CP)—To ward threatened collapse of farm product prices at the war's end, the Alberta Farmers Union executive has called on Canadian farmers to take immediate action to form a "farm bloc" among rural members of parliament and press for parity prices for farm products.

A NAZI SISTER TO THE BBC

That German soldiers in the occupied countries and even on the Western Front tune in to BBC broadcasts to learn what is really happening is long been known.

But David Anderson, of the National Broadcasting Corporation, of America came across a remarkable instance in France of the BBC's reputation for truth, even among the Nazis. He met a Nazi who surrendered as a result of a News Bulletin from London. Listening in his fox-hole he heard via BBC that he was surrounded so he climbed out, walked into the Allied lines and gave himself up.

BURLINGTON

Last Wednesday between the hours of 2:30 a.m. and 7 p.m., 4,000 new action books were issued to the people of Burlington and District.

Word was received here on Wednesday last that Capt. G. Earl Sisson, who had been killed in action overseas on October 2nd, in the last gasp of his life had been flying over Belgium.

On Saturday morning last at Nelson village a house owned by Walter Wilson, together with the contents was completely destroyed by fire. The fire was first discovered by Mrs. Wilson and she telephoned her husband, who was working in Burlington.

An automobile stolen from the garage of Tracy E. Freeman, Broad St., last Wednesday night was recovered by Toronto police in that city on Friday last. The Toronto police notified Chief Smith of the recovery of the car.

Magistrate Langdon issued a warning in police court last Friday that he intends to stop people from taking liquor to dance halls by imposing heavy fines. He started out by fining persons guilty of drinking liquor at such places $20.00 and costs, and on Friday raised the fine to $25 and costs, with the warning that it would be increased to $50 in future, or a term in jail, which will make it rather expensive to take such refreshments to dancing parties.—Casette.

GEORGETOWN

The 32th Anniversary of the opening of the Georgetown Baptist Church was fittingly celebrated on Sunday.

Albert George Green, former principal of Georgetown Public School, died suddenly in Boston on Wednesday, October 18th. He was in his 70th year.

Rev. Arthur Dayford, who was recently commissioned by the United Church for mission work in West China and is still awaiting word of complete arrangements for transportation to the Orient, spent the week-end with his parents in Georgetown.

A very impressive service was held last Sunday morning in Knox Presbyterian Church, for the presentation of the flag and the unveiling of the Honor Roll. Members of the Canadian Legion, Branch 120, the Legion Women's Auxiliary, and the Town Council and municipal officers paraded to the church where representatives of the Reserve Army were also present.

Pte. Bill Turk, overseas for three and a half years, arrived home last Friday morning, and says that words can't describe how he feels, but "it's sure good to be home with my wife and family again". His wife and daughter Joan have lived in Acton for the past couple of years. When Bill left for overseas his daughter was a little girl of 8 years, and she is now a young lady of twelve. He hardly recognized her.—Herald.

NASSAGAWEYA

The anniversary services of the Ebenezer United Church last Sunday had large gatherings at both morning and evening services. Rev. E. H. Semerville of Elmbrook United Church was guest minister. Special music was provided by the choir, who were assisted by a soloist from Guelph in the morning service and at the evening service by the Ambassador Quartette of Kitchener.

On Monday evening the annual congregational supper was held with a large gathering to enjoy the good things provided by the ladies of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. George Stokes and family of Campbellville attended anniversary services at Ebenezer on Sunday morning and visited relatives at Knatchbull during the day.

Mr. Frank Planders and son, Keith Planders of Toronto, attended anniversary services at Ebenezer and visited with friends in Nassagaweya on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Harris and family of Acton attend anniversary services at Ebenezer United Church on Sunday and visited with relatives and friends in Nassagaweya during the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Wilson of Acton, visited relatives and friends at Knatchbull on Sunday and also attended the anniversary service at Ebenezer Church.

The farmers are having hard work trying to get the fall plowing done, with the dry weather making the ground hard.

MUSEUM REPORTS ON ONTARIO FISH

One hundred and twenty-six species of fish live in the waters of Ontario, according to a report just issued by the Royal Ontario Museum. Many of these, of course, are of no popular interest because of their small size, but even the smallest serve as food for some of the larger sorts. There is a great difference in the number of species found in the south compared with the north. For instance, more than ninety species are recorded from Lake Erie, whereas a party from the Museum found fewer than thirty in Lake Attawapiscat in the Patricia District.

I'VE GOT ONE GOOD EYE LEFT

Under the shadow of the solemn Peace Tower on Parliament Hill, a 22-year old veteran of this war appeared before the microphone ready to signal the launching of a new warship at Lauson, Quebec.

Before a huge crowd, gathered to take part in the inspiring opening ceremony for the Seventh Victory Loan campaign, he was being briefly questioned by the Master of Ceremonies about his proud overseas life.

"And you were wounded?" said the Master of Ceremonies.

"Yes," replied Thawers modestly, and then added quickly with a note of thankfulness in his voice, "but I've got one good eye left and that's better than none."

"There were many in that crowd on Parliament Hill whose throats tightened by a sudden realization of the tremendous significance which lay behind the simple words of this repatriated soldier. And his statement remains significant as the Seventh Victory Loan Campaign proceeds.

An eye cannot be replaced. Money can. If the Canadians are imbued with the same spirit as this repatriated Finlor Edward Thawers has displayed and people in all provinces can be thankful that they have a good deal more money left that is necessary for the minimum success of the Seventh Victory Loan Campaign, there will again be a huge over subscription.

THEY ASKED ON THE "PLATFORM" ALL RIGHT

Slogans in wartime London were mentioned by a BBC speaker in a recent overseas talk. "Bark the Great Attack With War Savings," "Don't Telegraph or Telephone if a Letter or a Postcard Will Do," "It's Dig for Victory Still," "We Must have more Fuel for Battle—this means Coal, Gas and Electricity" were among a number he quoted.

But he mentioned one in particular that had caught the attention of a soldier travelling in the train with him.

"We've got our own slogans in the army," the soldier said, "but there's one up there I'd like to punch." It was a notice above the door of the compartment, a notice that is as old as the hillside "Before Allighting Look Out for the Platforms." "That," the soldier said, "might be useful on our invasion craft." The date of that talk was about a week before D-day.

From Italy that Appeared in the Newspapers just a few Days ago. . . .

"Rome, Oct. 29—Genova, on the coastal road six miles north of Genoa, has fallen to British 8th Army troops making their way up the Adriatic coast.

The Canadians last night clung with determination to a bridgehead they established Friday night across the Savio river.

The small groups of men holding the bridgehead lay on their bellies in mud, with rain crashing them, all through Saturday night. Sunday the sun shone down on them, but they still were lying in the mud, unable to move because of the vigilance of German forces around them.

The rain had swollen the turbulent Savio, which flows through Genoa and northward to the Adriatic northwest of Genoa, into a raging torrent, making it difficult to get supplies and reinforcements across to the bridgehead force.

They were relieved when other battalions later crossed the Savio followed by men of their unit, bringing food and ammunition."

Lying in the mud in drenching rain for two whole days—drenched in mud and blood and death. This is their contribution.

Our contribution is merely to lend money against the best security in the world at a good rate of interest so that our boys will receive that food and ammunition.
