Achievement of the Allied armies in Europe reflected in growing lists of Canadian prisoners of war freed after long confinement in German prison camps, held the "Capitals" attention last week.

Development abroad foreshadowed the unconditional surrender of Germany while in Canada the shaping of policies prophesied for the post-war period came in for discussion.

Munitions Minister Howe, speaking at Fort William, Ont., said it was essential that every step be taken to curb inflation in the early post-war years, since the weight of accumulated savings during this war probably would bring about an abnormal demand for consumer goods and so raise the threat of inflation.

Unless this tendency were checked, every step which any government might take to maintain a high level of income could be undone.

As soon as possible restrictive national selective service regulations imposed to meet wartime exigencies will disappear, and controls on supplies of materials also will be removed when the supply situation permits.

In announcing that the order "freezing" teachers to their profession will be rescinded from September next, Labor Minister Mitchell said the lifting of this restriction was "in line with the general policy of the government to discontinue wartime restrictions just as soon as their purpose had disappeared."

Mr. Mitchell said last week his department was taking steps to see that farm workers on postponement of military call-up to enable them to continue in agriculture, stayed on the land. The shortages of labor faced by Canada's farmers this year was a matter of grave concern.

Maintain Production

It was even more essential now than in the earlier years of the war that food production continue at a high level. There now were more than 160,000 men in agriculture on postponement.

"We cannot afford," said the minister, "to allow a single one of these men to just walk off the farm to work in another industry when his services are essential to food production."

The extent to which the United States has absorbed wheat for livestock feed and industrial uses and the drain upon reserves for feed and export in Canada were indicated in a review of the world wheat situation issued last week.

It did not now appear probable that the Canadian carry-over of wheat at July 31 will be less than 300,000,000 bushels. The prospective combined carry-over in Canada and the United States of 650,000,000 bushels, while "only moderately below" the 671,000,000 bushels carried over in 1944, still was the lowest mid-summer stock figure since 1940.

"Now that domestic requirements are sloping off, the urgent need for bread grains to feed the peoples of liberated Europe promises to cut still further into accumulated reserves. The principal factor limiting the movement of wheat overseas at the present time is the relative shortage of rail and water transportation facilities."

If a carry-over of 300,000,000 bushels of wheat in Canada at the close of the present crop year was realized there would be sufficient wheat to meet all foreseeable domestic demands and possible exports in 1945-46.

STAPLES IMPORTED

MADRAS—Imports of large quantities of wheat from abroad and rice from other provinces have materially contributed to the improved food situation in the Presidency. It is officially stated.

During the latter half of November, 1944, 25,900 tons of wheat and wheat products were imported by the Government. 11,944 tons of rice were also imported out of which 750 tons were later exported to Cochin State.

Madras is getting steady supplies of millets from the Punjab, the Central Provinces and Kathiawar State. Nearly 4,000 tons of millets and an almost equal quantity of pulses were imported by Government during the latter half of November.

HANDKERCHIEF TRICKS
FRESHEN SPRING SUIT

NEW YORK (CP)—Appalled at the high cost of dressing? Wondering how you're going to squeeze the price of a new outfit out of your depleted budget?

One solution is to freshen up that spring's suit or dress with some crisp new lingerie touches. You can make your own Jabot or collar and cuffs out of one or two sheer linen handkerchiefs. Irish linen ones are once more available, exquisitely hand-embroidered, with expensive-looking rolled hem or scalloped edges. The most elaborate ones cost no more than $2 each and the simpler ones are priced at about $1 or less. A lingerie collar and Jabot to wear with a suit will require two regular size handkerchiefs; a simple collar for a dress will take only one. For softly feminine styles, pick linen handkerchiefs which are hand scalloped and embroidered. For a crisp tailored effect, use a corded border style with hand-rolled hem.

To make a pleated Jabot cut off about four inches across one corner of the handkerchief. Lay the cut edge of the remaining piece in overlapping pleats and crease fan wise out to the border on each side.

Collars and revers are easy. A straight collar if it's cut in a strip the full length of a handkerchief and simply basted into a neckline. To make it fit a round neckline without gathering, the two ends may be folded back under.

Simplest of all is a "handkerchief bertha" to brighten up a dark dress. Simply cut a circle out of the middle of the handkerchief and fit it into the round neckline of the dress with one corner of the handkerchief at centre front and a corner at each shoulder.
