Continental Europe Needs Food Imports

The outlook for local food supplies and requirements in Continental Europe, according to the recent report issued by the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, definitely indicates a large import need for the remaining month (July) of the current consumption year (August 1, 1944 to July 31, 1945) and for the subsequent twelve months. The United Nations states the report, faced a situation which holds no prospect of improvement. Continental Europe's supply of food from domestic sources in the consumption year 1945-46 will be the smallest since the outbreak of war. The decline from 5 to 10 per cent total supplies do not tell the whole story. Distribution is equally important.

In view of these circumstances, especially the prospective decline in the production of food for the consumption year 1945-46 and a net deterioration in the effectiveness of agricultural and distribution controls, import requirements for a liberated Continental Europe will be large. Considering these requirements, not in terms of probable effective demand or availability of supplies and shipping but only in terms of the quantity necessary to bring about some improvement in liberated countries and prevent large scale starvation in enemy countries, a total of about 1 1/2 million short tons of food would be needed for the Continent in 1945-46. This total could consist largely of wheat, but should also include substantial quantities of fats and animal protein foods as well as sugar.

Student nurses' uniforms call for hosiery, double breasted overalls with belt and detachable buttons.

Operation to the new type uniform is expected from many of the big voluntary hospitals whose uniforms have become traditional.
