Great Days

These are days of suspense. As we write these columns on Monday afternoon the radio is issuing constant reminders that Japan's answer may be expected at any time and of course it is taken for granted that peace terms will be accepted. We have just recovered like everyone else from one wrong or premature report of peace again.

After nearly six years of war a great part of the first of which went hadly there is an anxiety by everyone for a return to peace. Most homes have been effected and many are longing again for the time of re-union. There is too the determining desire to complete the job now in such a way that war will not appear again. Between these conflicting desires these days of waiting are difficult times in which to settle down. Perhaps it would be well to ponder what peace will mean to the Chinese who have had fourteen years of war

Back Again

Vacation for us is over and we're back again on our tegular weekly visits. We hope you missed us, because we missed our work. We visited twice in the newspaper office in the town in which we stayed. but we didn't work. Perhaps it was just for the satisfaction of seeing someone else hustle on press day that we made the visit.

But the habits of fears are sometimes hard to: One of the big 'troubles in ever getting this break away from and we found the decision of missing an issue a difficult one to make after more than a quarter-century of being on the job every week. We found too, that the holiday week is quite week and we found one town where the staff had enjoyed two weeks. 🕳

In cities and towns alike, retail establishments and services have been trying out the plan of closing for holiday periods of varying lengths. We saw scarcely a business street in any town or city that didn't have a showing of signs in the window an nouncing a holiday period.

We predict holiday closing will continue after the war, in whatever plants and stores it is feasible When everyone enjoys a holiday, they expect that the other chap should have similar privileges and are willing to do without certain services so that all may have a period of rest.

The Clowns

Would-be dictators in the neon-lit, nylon-lined world of to-morrow will be up against a tough proposition on a planet whose ideological trends will be under the watchful eve of the United Nations' peaceguarding machinery. But human nature being what moment and the bullies may try again to run things for themselves.

Angling and Peace

From talk in the corner barber shops this has been a great season for anglers, so great, if you listen to the gossip, that it is a wonder some society an average of 21 a week. The total the manpower shortage. Publisher out for permanent world peace does not aim at a is greater than that for the last 18 is W L. Griffith, formerly of Powell Acton Cooper Building Phone 215 world peopled only by game fishermen.

It would be noisy, yes, with heavy talk of the big one that got away, with argument over tackle and where the fightingest fish are and how they should be taken. But if everybody became anglers nobody would have time for wars.

For example, there is the story of the Fredericton angler who wanted to join the army, but was turned down. He are his heart out and then one day a couple of pals showed him six whacking trout and he badgered them into agreeing with his guess they came from a certain nearly inaccessible pool. They admitted they used a certain little black fly.

Our friend could hardly wait. That was back in 1940 and he's been fighting his private battle to get to that pool every chance he gets. He hardly missed not being in the war at all.

At this time of writing he will not admit that he has not yet taken fish from that pool nor will his friends admit they caught the trout with worms from an entirely different water, but it goes to show the stuff of which fishermen are made.

They never give up and the fellowship is tre mendous. In his office the big steel executive may be a holy terror, but in the back woods with her tackle rigged he becomes a most pleasant, affable guy who figures he hasn't changed a bit from the farm boy who took trout with an old alder branch and a can of worms.

"peace-and-good-angling" world organized is the number of miguided folk who don't fish and some admittedly have good talking points."

There is, among this group, the fisherman's general. Every weekly newspaper has at least one! "widow"-- the little woman who stays home week-. end after week-end while our hero hikes off with his tackle and high hopes. But usually she becomes reconciled and deep inside takes pride in what hubby can do to the fish.

The agnostic is the man for the real suffersion iob. He won't get up at 5 a.m. He can't see trolling for hours, or paddling or portaging heavy packs or walking a trout stream or pleasure in beating off mosquitoes and black flies and wearing himself to a shadow - for some fish. . .

But what fun he misses. And what a lot he has to, learn.
