USE NEW SYSTEM TO PACK APPLES

DENTON, B. C. (CP) — A new system of packing apples, similar to the manner in which eggs are packed in cartons for retail, is being tried out by British Columbia Tree Fruit, Limited. More than 20,000 containers have been used for this season.

These first shipments have been sent to all parts of Canada, shipped under normal conditions.

The new method is named the Friday Pack, named after its inventor, Paul Friday of Portland, Ore. Each apple is nestled just as an egg is nestled in its container. A corrugated carton is used. Wooden posts in each corner take the weight when the carton is stacked.

The inventor claims the new system eliminates contact bruising, speeds packing, requires no protective paper wrapping and makes inspection easy. Water-proofed, specially oil-treated trays check scald and other storage diseases and permit more rapid cooling of fruit in cold storage.

The new containers used for the experiment were made in the United States, but if it proves successful they can be manufactured economically in Canada. Several millions have been used in the United States and good results have been reported.

THE ROBERTS-WEBBER WEDDING AT LAKEVIEW CHURCH

St. Nicholas' Church, Lakeview, was the setting for a very pretty wedding on Monday, February 11th, when Marjorie Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Webber, Lakeview was united in marriage to Donald, Charles, formerly a pilot officer in the R.C.A.F. and son of Mr. and the late Mrs. Samuel Roberts, Mimico. Rev. P. N. Knight officiated. Mrs. Caven played the wedding music and Mrs. Beale Hill sang "The Lord's Prayer" before the beginning of the ceremony while "Because" was sung during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white brocade satin. Her three-quarter-length veil was caught to a Queen Anne headpiece trimmed with seeded pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of deep red roses.

Miss Betty Whomond, maid of honor and Mrs. L. Thomas and Mrs. J. Webber, bridesmaids, were gowned alike in floor-length wine velvet dresses with cupped sleeves and long gloves and small hats of the same material. The maid of honor carried a bouquet of yellow roses while the bridesmaids carried bouquets of pink carnations. The flower girl, Miss Joan Webber, sister of the bride, was also gowned in long wine velvet, with short puff sleeves and a small matching hat. She carried an old-fashioned nosegay of pink carnations.

The best man was Mr. James Webber, brother of the bride. The ushers were Mr. Larry Thomas, Mimico and Mr. Fraser Morris, Port Credit. At the reception held at McKay's Drive-in, Mimico, the bride's mother received wearing a flowered mauve dress with matching hat and a corsage of yellow roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. J. Roberts, London, who wore a black crepe dress. Her corsage was of red roses.

The couple left by plane for New York, the bride wearing a brown gabardine suit with a brown hat and fur coat and a corsage of yellow roses. The bride is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nightingale of Nassagaweya.

Keeps 750 Pigs On Sask. Ranch

Farmer Specializing in Yorkshire Says Breeding Key to Success

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — Otis Jones of this northwestern Saskatchewan city can go the nursery rhyme one better, for nearly every week of the year as many as 55 of his pigs go to market.

He has one of the largest pig pens in western Canada, and he needs it to house 750 pigs, the average number he has on his ranch. He established his plant in 1942, complete with sewage disposal plant, septic tank and electric lights.

The large central pen is 240 feet long, with concrete floors and foundations. It is insulated, ventilated and equipped with wide alleys to facilitate the handling of feed. Within the building are 60 pens, each accommodating from 8 to 12 pigs, according to size. Others are accommodated in temporary straw sheds.

Mr. Jones specializes in Yorkshire hogs. The sows have more litters and there are more premiums to be had from this type of hog than from any other, he says. On the ranch, pigs are raised every month of the year. There are an average of 30 sows on hand. Each has two litters annually.

Last year was the peak period for Mr. Jones. He had an average of 1,000 pigs on his ranch. Some purebred hogs are raised for breeding purposes.

Brood sows are kept outside unless the weather is too cold. Their feed to which ample care is given, is taken a third of a mile from their sleeping quarters. In this way they receive ample exercise.

The young pigs receive alfalfa, reduced where necessary, and iron sulphate. After they are weaned they receive linseed meal in some instances. Larger hogs are fed a certain amount of ground limestone.

The hogs get their vitamins from buttermilk. In fact, they use the entire output of two nearby creameries. Annually they receive from 15,000 to 18,000 bushels of grain, most of it grown on the farm.

On Mr. Jones' ranch, a hog is ready for marketing about six months after birth. It goes to the packers weighing from 200 to 210 pounds. For successful ranching, hogs must be vigorous and well-bred, able to produce more pork at less cost and possessing high resistance to disease. The brood, says Mr. Jones, accounts for about 75 per cent. of successful hog raising. The remaining 25 per cent. hinges on intelligent care and good management.

A GOLD COAST DELEGATE IN PARIS

Arriving in England by plane from the Gold Coast, Joe Annan took a train to Newhaven on the South Coast, and then went across to Dieppe, the first French town he had ever seen. He was on his way to Paris to represent Gold Coast workers at the second World Conference of Trade Unions. In a talk which he broadcast from London afterwards, he gave overseas listeners his impressions of his first visit to Paris.

The train from Dieppe was so crowded that although he had a first class ticket he had to stand in the corridor throughout the four hour journey. And though he was very tired and hungry by the time he arrived at 11:30 p.m., he wasn't disillusioned. He didn't know pre-war Paris, but Paris of to-day captivated him by its elegant boulevards, its rich statuary, its colorful gardens and its clean streets.

"If you ask me how I overcame the language difficulty, the answer is simple, I didn't," he said. He took with him one of Hugo's Conversational French and a French dictionary and with those he got along. He just looked up what he wanted to say and then said it, filling in any difficult gaps by making signs. And the people of Paris, surely the most polite people in the world, were very patient and helpful. And he rejoiced in the complete absence of any "color" barrier, and the fact that passers-by didn't stare at a colored man; while in cafes and restaurants and other public places he was "accorded just the same treatment as a Frenchman. "In a sense" was his final comment, "the Frenchman resembles the Twi man of the Gold Coast from the point of view of courtesy; just as the Twi man prefaces his sentences with the courteous expression Me pa wo Kyew (I beg your pardon), so the Frenchman ends his sentences with Merel beaucoup (many thanks).
