Chronicles of a Ginger Farm

Written especially for The Acton Free Press by OWEN DOLINE P. CLARKE

An epidemic seems to have struck this district. No, it isn't measles or flu or anything like that—and although it must be terribly upsetting, I don't think it often proves fatal. The name of this disturbance is "sellin'." Never heard of it? Well, maybe you haven't but if you lived in this district and heard of farm after farm that had been sold or is up for sale you would know what I mean.

Why are they selling? Well, of course, that is their business but if one may hazard a guess I would say some of them are quitting on account of ill-health, others because they are tired of fighting against odds all the time, lack of help, shortage of feed, paying through the nose for everything they must buy, yes, buying all the time at selling prices and selling much of their own goods at less than the cost of production.

But if they are returned men taking up land under the Veteran's Land Act, they will have a fight on their hands and we certainly hope it will be a fight that will end in victory for them. And as to that, a lot will depend on the wives of these men, whether veterans or otherwise.

Already stories are coming to light of the difficulties some of these returned men are up against—particularly the married ones—of young wives who find things far short of their expectations with subsequent heartaches and misunderstandings—to which the housing shortage contributes in no small measure.

Most of the boys who have come back were so glad to be home again, for a while, they were right on top of the world. Then they came up against disillusionment, disappointment and unforeseen rehabilitation problems. It seemed no matter what plans they made for the future they were confronted with obstacles.

Is it any wonder our boys are restless, especially when, while we are presumably at peace, war clouds still hang ominously over the horizon. Are we going to let our boys down? They fought for us, now it is our turn to fight for them—to see that they get a square deal.

Historians Recall Early B. C. Fenians

Raid by Irish Revolutionists Conducted in Gold Mining Camp

VICTORIA, B. C. (CP) Some of the little known incidents of the early history of British Columbia are being turned up by Dr. F. W. Green, M.L.A. for Cranbrook, who with others has been delving into the past.

Dr. Green's probing has disclosed that in 1867 Fenians captured Wild Horse Creek mining camp, 100 miles north of Cranbrook, and robbed the miners. In a battle which followed, 16 Fenians were killed and 17 captured. Receiving advance notice that the Fenians were on their way to the camp, the miners are reported to have buried $200,000 in gold dust before the fight.

The story as revealed to Dr. Green by Charles Edwards, pioneer of the district, who obtained the reports from the survivors when he came into the country in the early 80s, was as follows: "Then Fenians—an Irish revolutionary society organized its members in the Wild Horse district to capture the camp. Nearly all miners in the area were Irish."

"By surprise the Fenians took possession of claims and seized all the gold they could find. The miners were disorganized until Michael Phillips, Hudson's Bay Company officer in charge, and two other men gathered them together and organized a counter-offensive, and subdued the invaders. The miners did not know what to do with the 17 prisoners captured, and finally decided to walk them out to the coast, about 500 miles."

"On their way they met a Judge Haynes on the trail. A trial was held and the 17 were convicted and sentenced to banishment, after which the captives were driven across the border into the United States."

CALGARY ALBERTAN PRAISES WEEKLIES

CALGARY, Alberta (CP) — Paying tribute to the weekly press of Canada, the Calgary Albertan said in a recent editorial that "the grass roots press—the country weeklies—can always be sure of a professional, and therefore sincere and informed, tribute in the offices of their larger brethren, the dailies."

The editorial went on to ask if the people they serve have the same appreciation of them. "The editor of the country weekly is a hard-working, valuable and too-often undervalued member of his community."

"He is a chronicler of its life, of its deaths and births, its daily round and occasional calamity... he has a sympathetic ear for everybody's troubles and everybody's joys. He is behind a goodly portion of all progressive public action, and at the same time takes great pains not to inflict private wrong or suffering."

Need for Teen-age Girls' Clubs Stressed by Welfare Groups

MONTREAL (CP) — General and urgent need for teen-age girls' clubs in Montreal similar to existing boys' clubs has been stressed following a panel discussion by a number of members of welfare groups.

Mrs. N. Vail of Ivery Community Centre said a good recreational program for young people would not solve the problem of juvenile delinquency although it certainly would help to check it because "basically our youth needs good solid families, good homes, schools and churches."

Mrs. M. Kennedy of the Juvenile Court said child delinquency was a symptom of maladjustment in society and urged great care in organization of girls' clubs because "we must give the girls what they want, within limits, and not offer them what we think they should get."

Mrs. N. Naylor of the Girls Counseling Centre said there was great need of leisure-time activity for girls because they learned "no good" hanging around small restaurants and stores. Although the compulsory school attendance act in Quebec had bettered the situation somewhat, a great number of girls still wanted to leave school at 14 and go to work.
