SUNSHINE ACCOUNT IS SHORT CUT TO CAREFREE HOLIDAY

'I had the time of my life," ward the man with the tanned face, to William Clayton, local Bank of Montreal manager. . "Bast vacation ever and all because I started my Sunshine Account well in advance." "You look better than you did this time last year," commented Mr. Clay-

"Frankly, I hadn't put enough aside for a good holiday a year ago," said the Sunshine Account enthusiast. "When I got back, I figured out what a real rest this year would cost. I began putting away one-twelfth of the money every month . . . in a separate account. That way I hardly missed it. And this year I did all I'd planned . . . without money worries. I had the time of my life . .

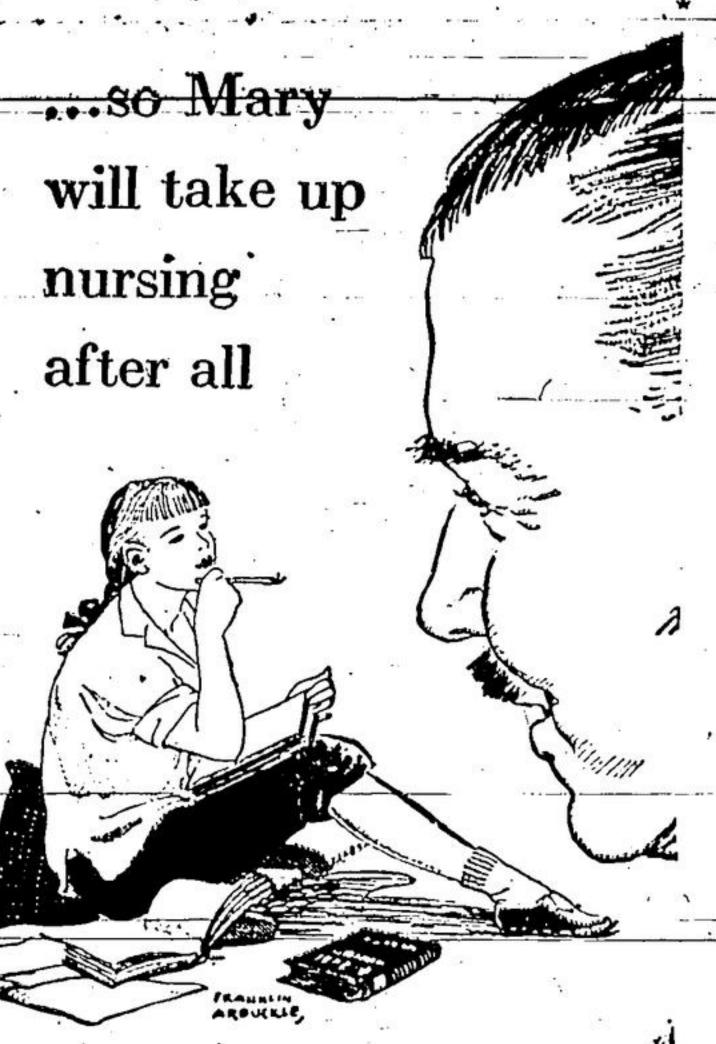

and I feel like a million." This plan can work for you, too. Why not start your Sunshine Account now-while there are plenty of paydays left before next summer? Money in the bank can add-a pleasure bonus to your holidays.

Ginger Farm

Written Specially for The Actor Free Press by GWENDOLINE P. CLARKE

Something tells me I am in for a lively few days. And the reason for the anticipated liveliness is a new kitten for the house-n kitten just about as seared and wild as it is cute. It is pretty little thing, black and white, part persian, and quite unused to being in this or any other house. In fact its birthplace was a tree. The mother cat belongs to a neighbor of ours and each time kittens are due to prrive Tibby chooses as their birthplace what remains of a hollow tree. There she is quite certain of being unmolested because slie cannot be reacked from without and there the kittens stay until such time as she chooses to introduce them to the outside world. Thus they are about two months old before the kittens ever see a human being; or any other kind of animal or know anything of the adventurous life that lies ahead of them. Naturally, they are, at. first, unfriendly and afraid of everything, but they-certainly know enough to use their, teeth and 🚾 claws. So that's the sort of little kitten I have got to tame. I rather like the idea. It is easy enough to make 🖼 friends with an ordinary kitten, but to win the confidence of givee frightened creature that instinct has already taught to bite and scratch, well, that's something else again.

After being in the house for about six hours the kitten has just decided | that the chesterfield is, after all, a little more comfortable than the narrow space undernicath the kitchen stove where there is barely room for even a kitten to get in and out of easily. It has also decided that having the top of its head rubbed is rather a nice sensation and so finally expressed itself by giving a few purrs of satisfaction. So much for my new pet. Partner also has some pets although they are not new and I am not sure that "pets" is the right word for them. I am referring to the cows and helfers to whom Partner is giving an unusual amount of attention because he has turned them into the front hayfield to pasture. Our neighbor across the road also has cows in his front field so that only the road divides his herd ! from ours. That would be all right except that the herd across the road is not entirely female. There is one of an amorous nature and should he be inclined to be false to his old loves and seek a new lady friend it is doubtful whether a couple of fences would be much of a deterrent. And so Partner keeps an ever watchful eye on our cows and helfers.

Incidentally the creatures are entirely unpredictable. One night Bob greased the mouldboard of his plough ready for an early start next morning. But he was no further ahead. During the night the cows came along | w and licked the grease off the mould-board. Well, one of our-worries is over, Bob has his wheat sown. Now we are hoping for a good steady rain. So far It has passed us by. Rain to the south and east of us but only a sprin- 35S Best Appearing Child, under 12 years, and Doll Carriage kle for this district. . However, we have him was thir share of heat. Hemember, back in that cold, cold spring I said I wouldn't grumble however hot | it became? Now I feel like saying I'll never grumble however cold it gets. But I won't say it, it is just too hum-

illating to eat one's own words. Eighty-five degrees, isn't exactly ideal canning weather, is it, friends? And yet the job must be done. Fruit, like time and tide, waits for no man. When it's ripe it's ripe, and that's all there is to it. Incidentally it isn't the ribe fruit that worries me, it is the half ripe fruit that rots before it ripens that gets me down. This surely must be an off season for fruits and vegetables. The potatoes have been terrible. Has anyone else had trouble in cooking them? I find they go to mush on the outside while barely | cooked in the middle. I have tried fast boiling, slow boiling, cold water, hot water, with salt and without salt ! Finally, by straming, I found it was possible to serve perfectly cooked potatoes To-day we had another disappointment. I cooked pepper squash, and was it ever tasteless. Please don't think I am grumbling, compared with other countries we are lucky to have so much, but I am curious as to the reason for the inferior quality of market garden produce this year and can only think that fruits and vegetables # 498 have in some way been adversely affected in this most unusual of all sum-

Speaking of food, wasn't that grand suggestion that a wedding present for Princess Elizabeth should take the form of postage-free parcels for Britain? I am thinking the response would be so great shipping space would be our next problem. If only food distribution could be more equally divided. Go to any city restaurant and you can see enough waste during the oating of one meal to keep several families for a week or longer.

By the way, regarding tasteless food, I bought-cheese yesterday, that didn't belong in that category. It just about walked off the table.
