DISCIPLINED LIVING (Temperance Lesson) Golden Text. Whether therefore

Exposition. I. Redeemed by Christ

Lesson Text. I Pet. 1: 13-23; 4: 1-

We are to study the interpretation of redemption by one whom the Lord redeemed. Peter is a vivid illustration of conversion. The Holy Spirit It's evident we have to our dismay so enriched his life and understanding a large number of these same pers- that his epistles are full of concentrated truth. This passage is one of the Mill, on glaning because it is connected really to the verses that precede it. Starting They do call. They can call. Why? Because God is no respecter of persons (Ac. 10; 34; Rom. 2; 11; Jas. 2; tends to "every man's work." This means the believer, the one who has (Luke 6: 46). Further prayer and work lend to reverence. This is worship. "Sojourning" describes the lot of those who are away from the Father's house but who are on their way home (Jno. 14: 1-3). What is a redeemed person (18, 19)?

> The apostle makes it plain that no earthly wealth purchases redemption. "redeemed," Here is a precious word meaning to be bought back, restored "With the precious blood of Christ, as Hotstein Bull, 18 mos. old. a lamb without blemish and without composite; they are worth, perfect- Brooder; Fountains, Feeders, etc. lon, holiness. "The life of the flesh is in the blood" (Lev. 17: 11). The value of Christ's life being immensurable, then the value of His blood is beyond our power to conceive. It is therefore efficacious in breadth and depth. No individual is excluded from its effectiveness and no sinner is so vile as to

H. An Example, 4: 1-5. One is a Christian to the extent he has the mind of Christ, i.e. Christ's manner of feeling and thinking. The m nd of Christ was to suffer in the farming. flesh (cf. Phil. 3; 5-8). Christ could have avoided suffering in the flesh, if He had so chosen. In the first place, it was purely voluntary on His George Currie, Clerk part that He ever became flesh; but beyond that, being in the flesh, He could, if he would, have avoided suf- i fering in the flesh. But to have done se would have involved His forsaking the path of obedience to God and love to man. He therefore chose to suffer. as suffering in the flesh was a necessary incident of obeying God and serving man. So it is for everyone (2 Tim.) 3: 12). Sooner or later the man who cheys God absolutely and lives to the utmost of his power for his fellowmen, must suffer for it in his body somehow. There will always be a conflict when the time of decision comes. To win in that conflict we must arm ourselves.

As one reads verse 3 it becomes increasingly evident that those to whom Peter wrote the lofty exhortations of this epistle had not always been saints, and yet the highest possibilities' of Christian living were open to them. Indeed, oftentimes the foulest sinners have become the fairest saints.

DUAL PERSONALITY

"Men make war or peace, poverty or prosperity," says Clare Booth Luce, former Congresswoman, "They are the same men who, as boys, were reared and taught and trained by women. If men are generally stupid," she admitted, "it is simply that women have failed tragically to be better women."
