November 15th — and a cold east wind a-blowing; three or four inches of snow on the ground—and that is our first taste of winter. It was enough to make Partner and I scurry around setting up furnace pipes. At least Partner did the scurrying at first because he didn't think he would need any help as the pipes were partly assembled—there were just a few new ones to put in and elbows here and there to be connected. So I went on with my baking. But of course you never can tell with stove pipes. The pipes were done and my second sheet of cookies in the oven when a voice from below called—"Can you come and help me down here just a minute?" Well, you know how it is—cookies or no cookies, when the Man of the House is wrestling with furnace pipes and help is required, one has to run—but definitely! So with hope in my heart but fear in my mind I gave what assistance I could, first downstairs and then up, and racing back to the kitchen whenever there was a lull in the wrestling proceedings. The result was only a few burnt cookies on the last sheet. Not as bad as it might have been certainly, and to have the furnace going was worth a little trouble and inconvenience. One can stand a certain amount of heat with a storm blowing from the east.

Yes, a little heat is all right—if only our railways would think so. I came from Toronto by train one night last week and I thought I would pass out from the heat. And the offices and stores in the city were almost as bad.

Do you know, the more I see of Toronto the more I like the people. They are so friendly. Yes, that's what I said—"friendly." An opinion which I know is not shared by everyone. Maybe it is just because I like people and I like to treat them as people, not as human machines put there for the purpose of selling hats or street-car tickets as the case may be. For instance there is a little waitress in a restaurant on Bloor; she has a charming manner and acts like a hostess anxious that the guests shall be pleased. When I thanked her for such good and pleasant service her face literally beamed. A tip under the plate is one thing but I rather fancy personal appreciation can lighten the load considerably for overworked little waitresses.

I had quite a lot of business to do last week—in offices and stores—and I found the same courtesy and friendly interest wherever I went—in fact the conductor on the train, ran past himself—he gave me a ticket to Detroit! Perhaps one has to show a willingness to go the second mile in friendliness, and that may be something the other fellow recognizes by instinct and responds to automatically.

Daughter and I had our evening meal with a friend of hers and then we went to see "Dear Ruth"—a show which no one should miss if there is any chance of seeing it. It is the grandest comedy I have seen in ages—a show that the whole family can enjoy. And here's hoping we have a few more in that style. Perhaps we shall—who knows? It depends on public opinion of course—and because of public opinion you may have noticed that "Dear Ruth" and "Quiet Week-End" are in their sixth and seventh week respectively, whereas "Forever Amber" had a noticeably short run.

By the way, we are anxiously awaiting the next issue of Maclean's Magazine in which Blair Fraser claims it is the farmer who is the biggest profiteer these days. That should be good. I wonder if Mr. Fraser got his statistics before or after the price of food went up?

We have a hunch that the men working on Highway 25 won't be sorry when this year's contract is finished. Most of the time now they have a bonfire burning where the greatest number of them are working. Even at that they look just about frozen—pumping water out of the creek and pouring cement can't be the pleasantest work when a raw east wind is blowing. However, the worst is over I imagine and we should soon be able to drive along the new stretch of road that cuts off two corners just below our place. Our hope next year will be for a paved surface.

KEEPING CONVERSATIONS FROM BEING RUINED FROM YOUR TELEPHONE

BRIEF is just one of the ways of practicing the master rule for the best telephone service. "Do unto others as you would like them to do to you—and do it first".

1. Keep calls brief.
2. Space your calls.
3. Avoid "Holding up".
4. Give right-of-way to emergency calls.
