Use Travellers Cheques for Ease And Security

If you'd like a safer, handier way of carrying funds on your next trip, you'd do well to join the thousands of Canadians who use Bank of Montreal travellers cheques.

For special safety, you sign each cheque on top as you buy it and sign again on the bottom when you cash it. Thus there is no difficulty about identification.

You can obtain these cheques at low cost in all B of M branches. They are safe, convenient, yet easily cashed.

William Clayton, local manager, recommends a B of M letter of credit for larger sums. He will gladly advise you about your other financial arrangements for travelling. Why not see him tomorrow? You'll be surprised at the many ways he can be helpful.

Have you $10.00 in UNITED STATES Money?

Existing regulations make it illegal for any Canadian resident to retain in his possession more than $10 in United States cash.

You are required to turn in to your bank, for exchange into Canadian money, any amount you have in excess of $10 in United States funds, without delay.

THERE'S A REASON

The reason is that Canada must have the U.S. dollars spent here by tourists, in order to make them available for the payment of imported goods and services needed to keep production and employment at a high level.

Chronicles of... Ginger Farm

Written Specially for The Acton Free Press
GWENDOLINE F. CLARK

Everyone seems to be fed up with the weather—rain, wind, cold, thunderstorms—and still more rain. Water, water, everywhere. It is too bad for the farmers who have not yet finished seeding—but there is not one thing anyone can do about it. We were watching the skies anxiously ourselves towards the end of last week but thank goodness we were just able to get through before the rain came. We were so glad. It is a tiring business—to say nothing of the worry when seeding drags on through the weeks. It must be particularly discouraging to those who have recently taken up farming—we old-timers are more or less hardened to the vicissitudes of farm life!

I wonder if this unusually active period of buying and selling farm lands is general throughout the province. In all the years we have been here we have never known so many farms change hands in such a short time. In this district it doesn't seem long since we rated as "newcomers." Now by comparison, we can almost be classed as "old-timers" as, one by one, neighbours pull stakes and move into town.

When many will be contented. Often we hear of retired farmers who, in their town homes, they hardly know what to do with themselves. Probably the women settled down more happily than the men—glad of the opportunity to give more time and thought to their homes without the interruptions incidental to farm life. They like to be able to step out, do their own shopping and then walk home again. If they have nostalgic yearnings very few admit it.

And then what of the newcomers to the country—the man from the city who suddenly decides farming is the life for him! Sometimes I wonder... perhaps that type too, keep their feelings to themselves. "The simple life" is often eulogised through lack of actual experience. Personally my heart aches—and my indignation rises—when I hear of a middle-aged man, quitting his job, putting his money into a hundred-acre farm and expecting his wife and family to adjust themselves to an entirely different way of life, possibly without the conveniences to which they have always been accustomed. For them "the simple life" very soon becomes mighty complicated. Of course, a few acres with a comfortable home, that's something else again. I can think of nothing better in these days of over-crowded living quarters. But a hundred acres—oh no! Not if you haven't been used to farming.

There are those who think of farming, with a stable full of cows, as a part-time job—quite possible if probably organized. Usually there comes a rude awakening; enthusiasm wanes—and another farm is up for sale.

But the newcomers that I think we all welcome, and who should be given every encouragement, are the young couples setting up for themselves. You just sort of go along with them, sensing their courage, their energy and their ambition—and you hope to heaven life will not deal too harshly with them. Disillusionment can be bitter experience for those who cannot rise above it, but a challenge to those who can. Sure, these young farmers will make mistakes, sometimes costly ones—they are young yet in experience. But what they lack in experience they make up for in initiative. Most of them are progressive—the chances are they will give that "new look" to farming—and their wives, if they are the right kind, will be right there with them. The future of agriculture lies in the hands of these young people. They probably will not be required to face the physical hardships that their grandparents knew, at the same time every age has its problems. So we say, more power to the younger generation. The world needs you your strength, your vitality and your brighter outlook.
