IT ISN'T NEWS

One of the bulletins issued by Industrial Accident Prevention Associations this month to industry in Ontario points out that accident prevention "isn't news."

The bulletin states that it is not news when a saw guard saves a man's hand, but that it is news when the hand is lost; that it is not news when safety goggles save an eye, but it is news when an eye is lost; that it is not news when a man goes to the first aid room for a minor cut or scratch and prevents infection, but that it is news when infection develops and a permanent disability or a death results. Finally the bulletin states "it isn't news when the stairs in a plant are kept free of obstruction, but it is news when someone trips over something on the stairs and breaks a leg or arm."

FARMING ADVENTURE IS RACE AGAINST TIME

17 farmers have combined with engineers to undertake a big reclamation scheme on the East coast of Britain, which will win 1,400 acres of new arable land from the sea. In a race against time and tide they have set themselves the task of building a sea wall 5 1/2 miles long in 17 weeks. The whole success of this farming adventure depends on completing the wall in time to prevent the high equinoctial tides next September from flooding the land to be reclaimed. The scheme is being carried out in Lincolnshire on the North coast of the Wash. At present the land is a desolate stretch of salt marsh which is covered by the sea to a depth of several feet at high tides each spring and autumn.

Acton Takes Georgetown In Baseball Saturday

Backstop Effective
The visitors biggest threat was assimilated in one player—Ajachi a Jap-Canuck catcher. He was the most consistent of all. In four trips he smashed out three hits to pace Georgetown. Everett Wilson, with a two for four ran 'up.

Two gems from Baxter Labs led the triple A at bat. Masters with three hits in four trips had a field day at the expense of Gibson who looked uncomfortable in the first place. "Pee Wee" showed him personally where the showers ran.

Ab Robinson made a startling climb when he scratched three safe hits out of 5 trips.
Errors played a big part in the Papermakers loss—four bobbles were tacked on "the dark side" of the ledger. Acton went errorless. Georgetown looked strong on defense when they settled down to the task confronting them. More grooming and additional moundsmen would strengthen their cause considerably.

Our Favored Irresponsibles

By Joseph Lister Rutledge

Sometimes it appears that standing on one's own feet has become an unprofitable virtue. We seem to have replaced the belief in the rugged qualities of self-reliance that built this country with a sentimental assumption that the inefficient, the imprudent and the lazy man should be assured all or even more benefits than accrue to the man who stands on his own feet and bears his own responsibilities.

Let us consider two such opposites in men. One, let us say, earns about $4,000. He sets aside annually $500 in savings and invests another $500 in insurance protection. He has $3,000 remaining out of which to pay for taxes, living costs and pleasures. The other man, confident that the impersonal force that he calls "the government" will assume his obligations, saves nothing and assures nothing. He has $4,000 to spend. Yet they are taxed equally—a sort of bonusing of irresponsibility.

Recently Mr. Murray Cotterill, President of the Toronto Labor Council, unwittingly took the argument a step farther. In challenging the increased cost of service of the Consumers' Gas Company, an increase made necessary, so the company avers, by a $470,000 payroll increase in the past year, Mr. Cotterill said that any increase was "excusable so long as one cent of profit was going to private shareholders." We do not intend to debate the merits of this specific case, we mention it only because of its bearing on the case of our provident man. He must invest his savings somewhere. It might be in Consumers' Gas stock—though the particular stock doesn't matter for, if Mr. Cotterill's argument applies at all, it must apply to all stocks. The provident man then is further handicapped by having his savings depreciated.

Now, if his investment can't earn a profit, why should he or anyone assume the risk that investment involves. Yet if no one invests, how do industries finance their continued operation? If they don't, of course, both of our men are out of jobs. But here again there is a difference. The one begins, only a little sooner than he had anticipated, his policy of leaning on someone else. But the independent man sees his whole program of life go by the board—savings eaten up, insurance lost or devalued. Yes, we can't help believing that we are loading the dice against the man who wants to stand on his own feet.

FULL DRESS AGAIN FOR BRITAIN'S GUARDS

It has been announced that for the first time since the beginning of the war the Brigade of Guards will again wear full traditional dress for ceremonial occasions. The first big event at which the colorful and picturesque uniforms will once again be on view to the public will be at the trooping of the Colours on June 10, the King's birthday. When this ceremony was reviewed last year the Guards wore ordinary battledress.

Campaign Gets Warm at Halton Nominations

ing the Old Age Pensions, Reforestation and conservation program, increase workers' compensation and to include farmers in the workmen's compensation scheme.

Dr. Deans paid tribute to his opponents adding he held nothing personal against them, only they "belonged to the wrong party." Throughout his address he humorously chided Col. Drew and his government, adding Hydro was a "flimsy excuse to call an election for."

"He said this was to be an election on the Hydro question, but now it turns out to be a promotional campaign. In one part of the province he promises a university, in another he will build bridges, and in another municipal grants. I am sorry he did not come to Halton for it is hard to say what he would have promised us," he declared.

Dr. Deans told his audience several important items were pledged by his party. They included; increasing the Old Age Pensions to $40 a month and decreasing the age limit to 65 years. Not collect a Provincial Income Tax, Assist hospital without assistance from the amusement tax field, institute two weeks vacation with pay for industrial workers, and to assist young farmers to set up their own farms.

Harsh expressions greeted Mr. Hall as he paid tribute to his opponent. He said it was the third time he was placing his name before the electors of Halton, and was proud to be a member of a government under the Leader, Col. the Hon. George Drew.

"There is not a bigger or stronger man in Ontario, than Premier Col. the Hon. George Drew. The speaker could hardly be heard amidst, boos and applause. Many threw questions at Mr. Hall through the din.

Settling down to a normal questioner, Mr. Hall explained to a questioner, that the Ontario Stockyards rendered more service to the people at less cost than had previously been done under private ownership. And again he was forced to almost stop as he praised the stand of his leader in rendering a sane and strong government, by boos and laughter.

Continuing he explained the Drew government had not added further taxation on the people, other than the gasoline and amusement tax when that field was vacated by the Federal government, adding that 4 million American cars came to Ontario last year. He asked the audience if it was not fair to assess them the 3 cents or half cent a mile as it amounted to, for the use of the best highways in the world?

Charging that there must be Communists in the ranks of the Liberals as they had already stolen some of the planks from the C.C.F. brought cries of shame from some quarters of the audience. Dr. Martin again called for order as Mr. Hall invited some of the hecklers to the platform to make their little speech. "If there are not, then keep quiet," he cried. No person offered to go to the platform as invited.

Referring to beer parlours, Mr. Hall stated the Drew Government never ordered them, as he was interrupted by Allan Clements, "May I say something."

Upon invitation he proceeded to the platform and took his place beside the speakers.
"I will only take a minute, and then I'll get down," he said as the chairman allowed him to proceed.
"Since you brought that up I would like to know why they are still building beer parlours in Toronto, when I can't get enough material to build at the present time? I don't see why they are allowed to build places like that when we cannot get the materials. I came to town today for cement and couldn't get any. However I found some and came here to the meeting. Over 30 people came to my home in the country, from Milton seeking a place to rent and live. I just can't understand it. I'm not a communist—I'm a darr, good Canadian, and would fight again for Canada. But you seem to call a dissatisfied Canadian a Communist. That's all I have to say," as he retired from the platform.

As the speaker proceeded to inform his audience that by opening cocktail bars, the drinking of hard liquor had been curtailed 50,000 in the first eleven months.
Mrs. C. K. Stevenson rose to question why, if the government had curtailed the drinking of hard liquor had it not presented the figures giving the amount of beer and wine that had been consumed in the same period.

Mr. Hall stated that had he had the figures with him he would gladly present them, but the government had not increased the public houses in Halton. He explained that a municipality requesting a referendum on closing houses would be able to do so by making the proper petitions. "There has never been a vote taken in Halton, and you people have not asked for it," he countered.

He praised Premier Drew for taking the members in to his confidence regarding all bills. He said they were put before the council and discussed in council before they were presented to the house.

He also read figures which appeared in the local papers stating facts about the increased grants made by the Drew Government to Halton County, adding there were many other bills aiding the progress of the Province also passed, by the government he was so proud to represent.

When Mr. Hall spoke his full 30 minutes, the Chairman asked if questioners had pertinent items they wished other candidates to answer. As no further questions were made the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

PRACTICAL WAYS OF WEED KILLING

Experiments begun in 1947 at the Dominion Experimental Farms at Brandon, Man., and Swift Current Sask., have been carried to the point that indicates there is a definite future for 2,4-D as a practical means of controlling certain weeds in grain crops and flax.

Satisfactory results have been obtained, through the application of 2,4-D solutions in volumes of water as low as three or four gallons per acre. This development means that 2,4-D is practical for use on large fields and the success achieved, when this chemical is used as a dust alone, has added to its popularity.

Because 2,4-D is selective in its action it is valuable in the destruction of susceptible weeds during the crop season, but its use also suggests limitations in its use as a substitute for tillage in the control of weeds in general.

The cost of applying 2,4-D will be in the neighborhood of $1.75 per acre in 1948; or 90 cents for the chemical and 85 cents for machinery and labour. Ploughing on the average costs $1.40 per acre one-way and 85 cents and cultivating 70 cents. Other than in standing crop it is cheaper to use tillage implements to kill weeds and 2,4-D should be considered mainly as a useful supplement, rather than as a substitute for good tillage practices.

Not all weeds by any means can be killed with 2,4-D. Common mustard and stinkweed can readily be killed, pigweed less readily. Russian thistle with difficulty, while Canada thistle and sow-thistle can be killed to the ground but heavy applications are necessary to kill the roots. Wild buckwheat, cockles, and blue lettuce are practically resistant. Grasses and wild oats are definitely resistant.

Low pressure boom spraying is being widely adopted, spray rigs are now simple and relatively cheap, but machines powering 30 to 40 foot booms are necessary for large acreages because the spraying season at the best is short.

Spraying with 2,4-D for the control of weeds in grain seeded down to grass and clover is not recommended because of possible serious injury to the young grasses or clover.
