

FISHERMEN AND NATURE

One thing which helps to make the sport of fishing attractive to many persons, is that they do their fishing in scenes of lovely nature which they enjoy.

If the fish are slow to bite, there is at least pleasure for many in watching the scenes of beauty by which they are surrounded.

The fish jumping out of the water to catch some insect make a sudden flash and are suggestion that the fish are there even if they show lack of interest in one's bait.

THE MIXING BOWL... Hello Homemakers! Only those who have stored vegetables can realize the value of this home-grown supply of food and appreciate the resultant saving.

The quality of many vegetables is dependent upon the time and stage at which they are harvested. Then the method of storing will determine how long the garden produce will keep.

Small quantities of root crops such as beets, carrots, parsnips, potatoes, rutabagas and salsify should be stored in a root cellar or dark basement in moist sand, alternate layers of the roots and either in piles or in boxes.

If larger quantities are to be stored, they can be piled in bulk in a root cellar or in an outdoor pit. Storing in pits will vary according to the climate of the district as there is more danger of deep frosts in the northern parts of the province.

Choose a well drained spot and make a shallow excavation, three or four feet wide and one foot deep. Put a good layer of straw in this trench and pile the vegetables in a conical heap. Cover with one or two feet of straw and when weather gets nippy cold, add four to six inches of soil.

Some vegetables, e.g., pumpkins and squashes, need warm dry storage conditions such as a wooden shelf in the basement.

In the urban home, a vegetable room in the basement is the most convenient storage place. Spray with a D.D.T. solution and use no-draft vent at door or window and check with the necessary thermometer which should record approximately 40 degrees.

Remove pits from plums after wiping well. Wipe and chop apples. Combine with other ingredients in preserving kettle. Cook, uncovered, gently until thick (about 30 minutes) stirring frequently.

The Sunday School Lesson SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17th

LAW IN THE BIBLE

Golden Text.—You shall love the Lord with all your heart, and with all your soul and with all your mind. This is the great and first commandment.

Lesson Text.—Deut. 6: 20-25; Lev. 19: 9-14, 17-18.

Exposition.—I. Teaching Resignation in the Home, Deut. 6: 20-25. Our first duty is to God. God is infinite and we are finite and no number of finites ever equals infinity.

The next thing to do with God's word is to teach it to others and especially to our own children; we should teach it "diligently."

The instruction is an amplification of the Ten Commandments with some additional details. It is to be noted that each instruction is followed by the declaration, "I am the Lord," or "I am the Lord your God."

Commencing with v. 3, we see God's holiness as righteousness in action. In this case it is reverence for parents that is required, and keeping of the Sabbath.

the blind is made a religious duty, in principle showing how holiness is expressed in pity and service to such unfortunates. Holiness is next revealed in judicial decisions in v. 15. There is to be no respect of persons. The poor are to be as righteously treated as the mighty.

There is to be no respect of persons. The poor are to be as righteously treated as the mighty. Sin is to be kept out of the courts. We may presume that the instruction in v. 16 is related to the foregoing verse. Not only must the character, reputation and possessions of people be safe in the courts but they must also be protected outside. Holy conduct could not permit any man to defame or maltreat his neighbor, neither would it allow him to hate him. It is summed up in v. 18: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."
