medicine. We apologize. This time you meet "Busher" Jackson and his Fenelon Falls club. Lots of luck because you'll need it. By the way can you answer our $54 question? You can't—funny, neither can we. Abruptly twelve receivers went back in their books and the members of our illustrious board resumed their occupation of guessing at the next question. Meanwhile, in Acton, Doc Sirra and Lio Marzo nursed strong grins. Did we ever put one over on them.

BURLINGTON
At the regular dinner meeting of the Lions Club, held at the Drant Inn on Monday evening the members of the Lions Club went on record as supporting the proposed arena and went on record by passing a motion as being 100 per cent in favor of the proposition.

OAKVILLE

With the town's long awaited and much heralded postal delivery slated to get under way on March 5th, 6 newly appointed rookie postmen are this week busy absorbing sorting fundamentals from amiable Postmaster Bill Litchfield as they prepare to take over last year's sorting chores.

Try winds which whipped the platform failed to cool the enthusiasm of the principals last Saturday afternoon, as a large group of Oakville, Bronte and Trafalgar residents gathered at the site of the new Oakville - Trafalgar Memorial hospital to witness a brief but impressive cornerstone ceremony.

An enthusiastic crowd of Scouts, Cubs, Guppies, Brownies, parents and friends last week taxed the capacity of Victoria hall to take part in the varied program which goes to make up the annual Scout-Guide Week rally - Trafalgar Journal.

INSURANCE AND INFORMATION
HAROLD WILES
MILTON ON

Spectators who experienced their first taste of Junior hockey this semester last Wednesday night, probably didn't get a favourable impression of what they saw. Queenston, however, was undoubtedly the weakest club to invade the compound here to play O.H.A. hockey since the edifice was erected. Their exhibition didn't serve to increase the volume of paying customers who might make an appreciable increase in attendance figures at future games. Candidly, the series probably did more injury to the gates than it did anything. And it is hoped officials know exactly whom to point an accusing paddle at—the O.H.A.

Old Hatpin Annie wearing smoked glasses was an easy mark for the Beavers who desired a bye into O.H.A. playdowns. Can you play hockey, she asked? Indeed we can, replied the Queenston hockey brass, we are past masters of the art. Last year we ousted Chippewa, a fair sized city, from O.H.A. playdowns and this year we intend to win the O.H.A. championship.

Perception dimmed by her smoked specs and long exultant about her ability to preside at trial by error Annie promptly nodded an assent to the lads who have lived under the shadow of Brock's monument all their lives. Consider yourselves in, she added. First you will meet a team from a small place called Acton, which, I might add, has always been a thorn in my side. There's an Irishman up there I'd like to get even with. He seems to get the better of me in every encounter. Go to it Beavers!

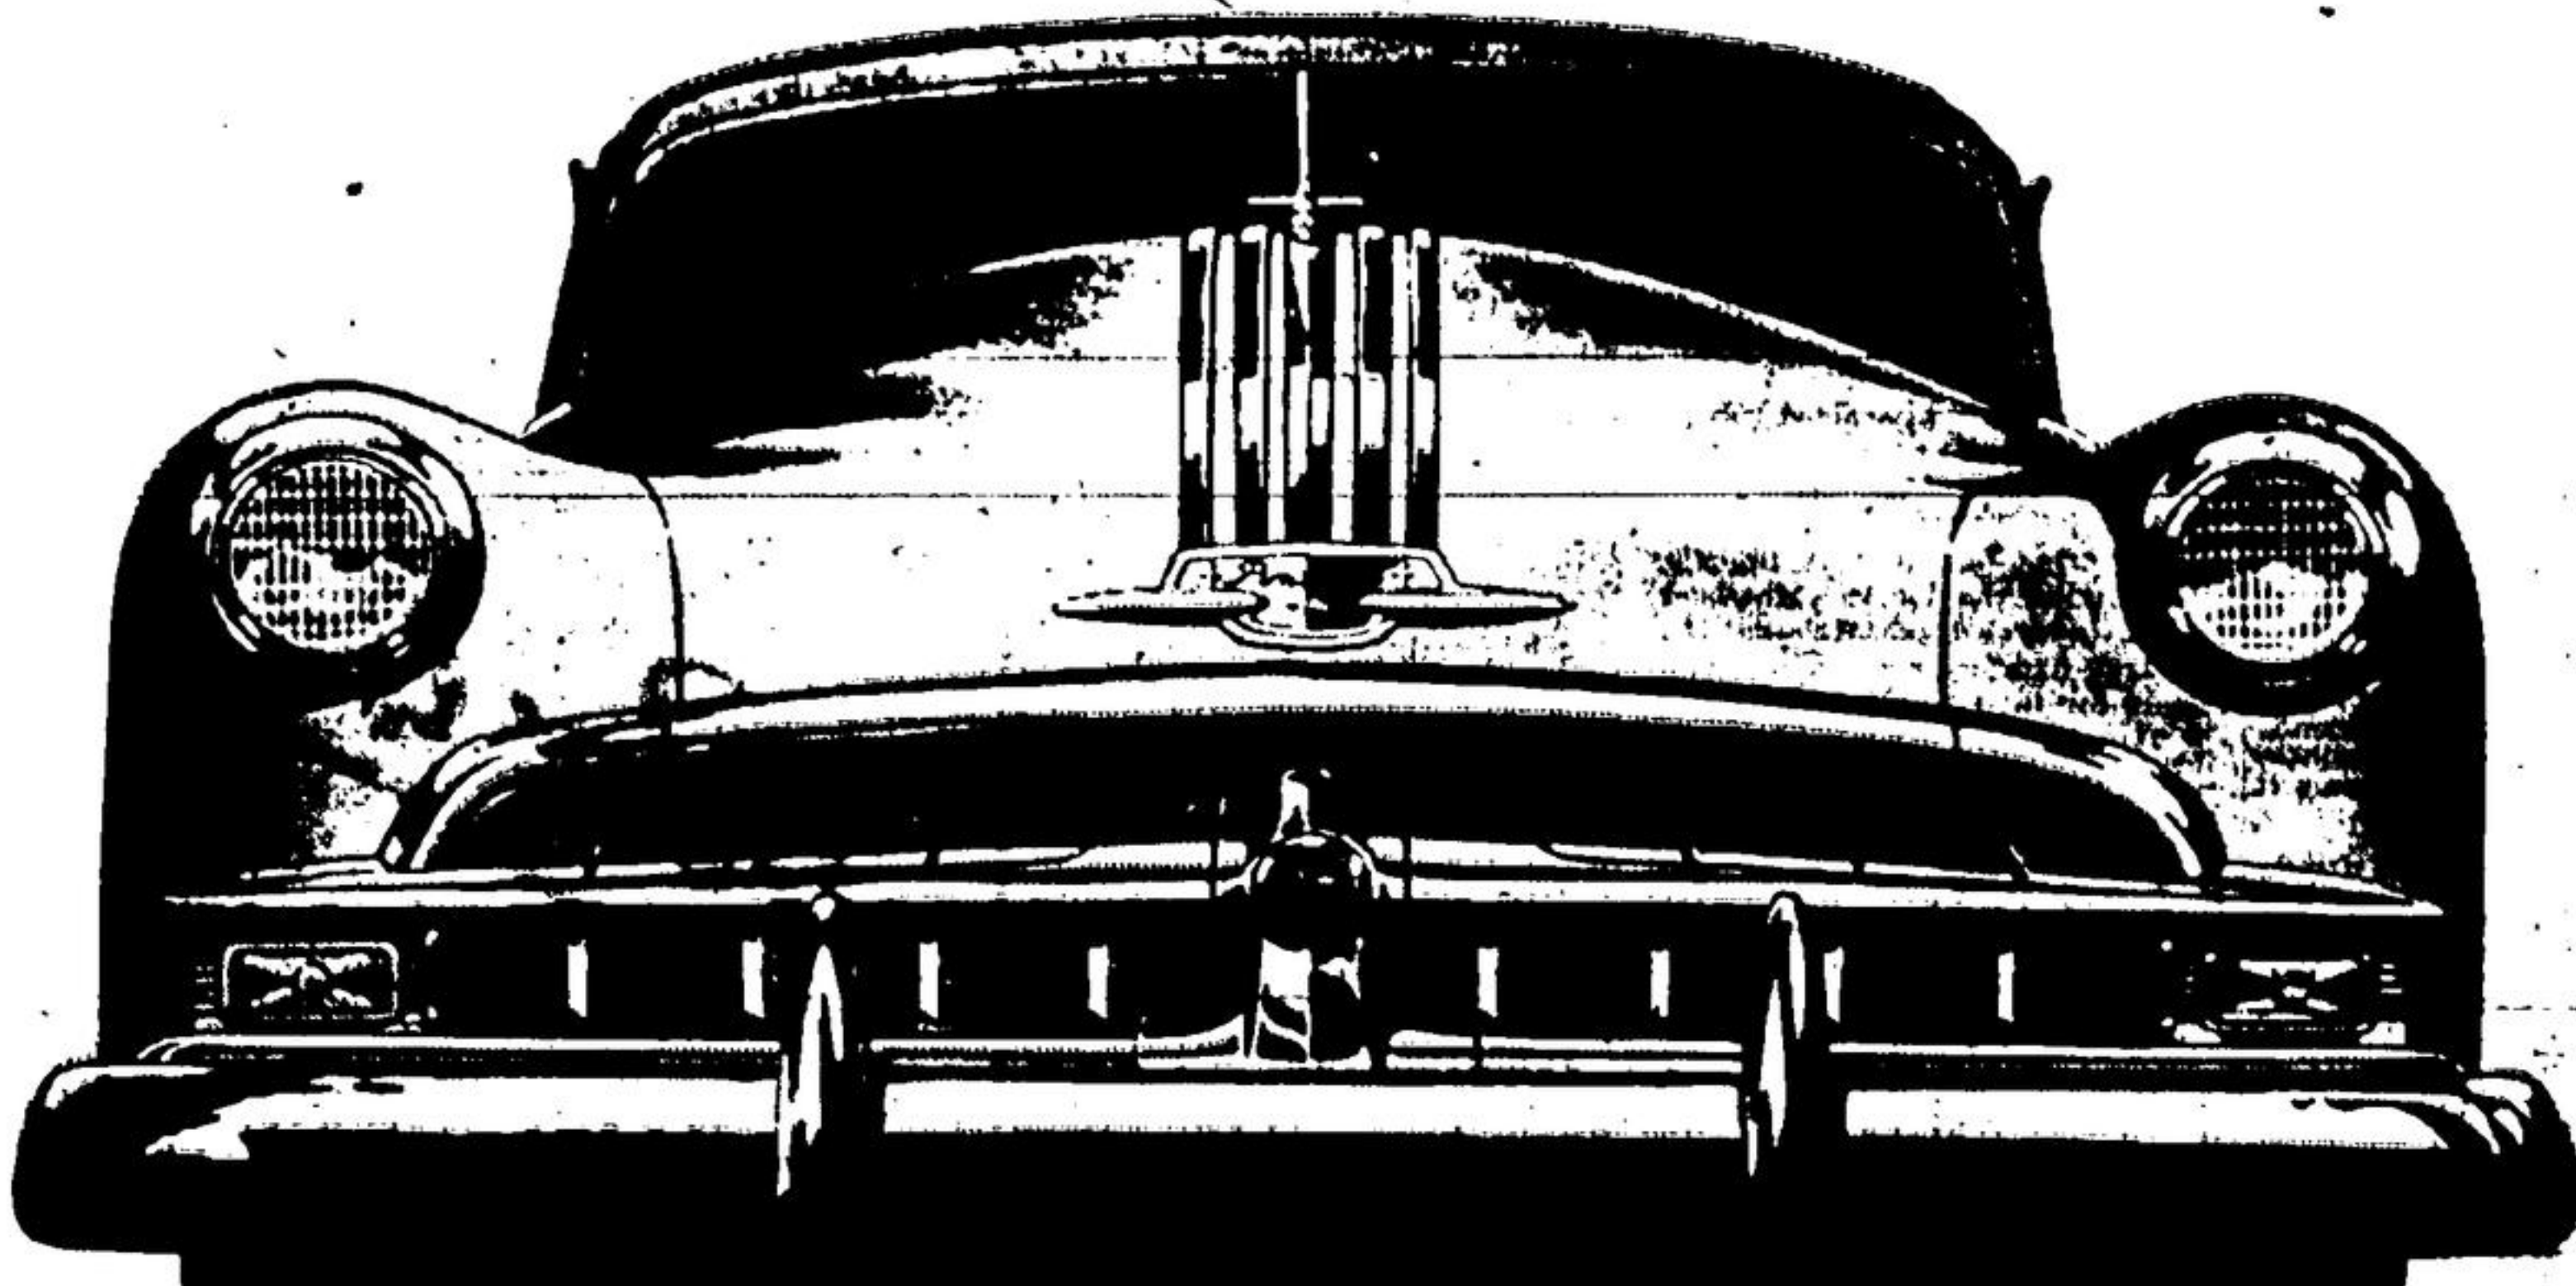

To recount the ensuing episode that took place in Acton last Wednesday would be utter folly. Instead we transfer you to O. H. A. headquarters after the game where the entire Board comprising the sedate old dame are awaiting the result of the contest on the NBS network. Picture them curled around a round table modelled after King Arthur's with their fingers protruding deeply into vest pockets, busy drawing mental images of what occurred in Acton Arena. On the wall is a picture of a certain player with the words "Pierre Cadieux" inscribed beneath it. Above the photo are the amazingly popular words "Our $54 dollar question". At this juncture a dozen telephones jingle. A dozen receivers leave the hook.

Hello! This is Doc Sirra, thunders an ominous voice. What in blazes was that you despatched up here to-night—your best team. We had a heck of a tough time beatin' 'em. Just edged 'em 32-1. By my painless drill, if you don't call the next game off in St. Catharines and give us a fair chance, I'll never speak to you again Mr. Trousers... er Mr. Panthanger or whatever your name is. You're always pickin' on us just because we eliminated Georgetown.

Do you know—we were lucky to win! If it hadn't been for Acton scoring the first 31 goals that team would have beat us.

"Don't break a blood vessel Doc," purred a smooth pair of tonals at the receiving end. We'll see what we can do. Hang on! At these words the Board swung into action. Twelve semi-balded pates went into conference. After several minutes they seemed in agreement and their spokesman, Mr. Trousers... —as Mr. Panthanger or whatever his monicker is contacted the Doc who by this time was drilling his own molars he was in such a stew. We've reconsidered your case. Guess Queenston was sort of bad.
