It's unwise to pay too much, but it's unwise to pay too little. When you pay too much you lose a little money that is all. When you pay too little, you sometimes lose everything, because the thing you bought was incapable of doing the thing it was bought to do.

Jargon Necessary - But Not Too Often

Language of specialists in any subject, from sport to religion, tends to grow away from common speech. Sometimes this is necessary. The physicist and the theologian, dealing with matters and processes not directly present to the senses, are almost forced to develop a language of their own to avoid the confusion that would ensue if they used everyday words to express something out of the ordinary.

In other professions or trades mystifying language, it is suspected, is used principally to impress the layman. The theory is that the layman will more cheerfully pay for services that he believes to be immensely complicated than for something so simple that he can clearly understand it.

That explanation may account for the writing of some academic economists. There are honorable exceptions but the erudite economist who condescends to explain to the layman that two and two make four is likely to say something like this: "Under certain favourable conditions and when similar objects are in question, if two such objects are added to two other such objects, the total may almost invariably be equated with four."

TWISTED LINES

With the advent of the summer season, concentrating on hook and sinker becomes a little difficult for the old fishermen on the wharf, because of the bathing beauties who saunter up and down wearing clothes of negative cover value. What the hell do they think they're doing, anyhow? grumbled grizzled old Jim.

Relax, feeling in to re-bait, studied the parade. "I'd say they was trolling with live bait!"

Proposed export of Alberta's excess natural gas will mean additional heavy royalties for the province if it can be shipped cheaply enough to compete with other fuels on the big markets of the North-west U.S.

Sunday School Lesson

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 10th 1950 THE STEWARDSHIP OF THE GOSPEL

Golden Text: This is how one should regard us, as servants of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God. Moreover it is required of stewards that they be found true. 1 Cor. 4: 1, 2

Lesson Text: Ac. 8: 4, 8, 2 Cor. 5: 17, 20 Phil. 1: 12-18

Exposition: 1. Persecuted Christians and a Revival in Samaria Ac. 8: 4, 8

The incident related here is that of the revival in Samaria. It was the first of the great revivals of the church in the early centuries. The apostles remained at Jerusalem. Everyone who has found Christ should be a steward of Christ's work in the world.

Philip went down to the city of Samaria. He preached the Word. Many of the Samaritans believed on him. Simon the magician followed him, and he was amazed because he saw signs and wonders being done by Philip. He followed him, and he was amazed because he saw signs and wonders being done by Philip. He followed him, and he was amazed because he saw signs and wonders being done by Philip.

Fashion Hint

Here's a winter extra that is by no means a new idea. The fact is, it's an old one. Skiers were finding the quality of the snow while the sun shined, was beginning to let what they needed for a winter of skating, skiing and tobogganing ahead. And the young ladies should be carefully choosing a new dress for this season as just as attractive as the old one, but it's carefully chosen.

As well as questioning water and waterproofing, be sure to try a skirt and one to let it fit, too, enough for warm clothes beneath for tobogganing and yet graceful in the lines. You must be able to move easily. Colours, too, should be chosen with as much thought as the materials as they are for any other outfit.

Christ be preached. With what patience and tolerance Paul was ready for opponents who even preached of "evils and trifles." What of it so long a Christ was preached. If a Christ that even Paul had not any other preacher (Ac. 17: 18)

Berchtesgarden Is Tourist Attraction

(From London Correspondent of The Ottawa Journal)

The Americans are doing a busy business running what remains of Berchtesgarden as a show place for 50 cents a visitor. Hitler had the mountain fastness built in 1934 when he obtained full control of Germany and provided new homes for all the farmers, householder and unskippers whom to ensure complete isolation he had evicted from all surrounding territory within some miles.

Its one in three gradient of concrete roads is too much for many motor vehicles. Thousands of men were employed as the war progressed, turning the "Eagle's Nest" into a last-lap fortress, but American paratroopers took it without a fight. Souvenir hunters have done more damage to Hitler's historic retreat than all the bombing. Bits of tiles and the door handles, from Eva Braun's bathroom now repose in front parlors all over the world.

Berchtesgarden is magnificently placed in awe-inspiring pine-clad mountain scenery. But it has one big drawback. Periodically comes the Föhn, the scorching wind from the Sahara which has the most depressing effects on the human nervous system. When it prevails headaches are epidemic, suicides increase, and some surgeons refuse to conduct serious operations. It has even been suggested that the Föhn may have explained some of the Fuehrer's brain storms.

In the current number of that admirable publication "Soldier" is a remarkable photograph. It shows Berchtesgarden in its untouched pre-war splendor and on the steps leading to the residence are Viscount Halifax, Baron von Neurath and Hitler himself, none of them looking in the least preoccupied of impending tragic destiny. This was taken in 1937. It is baffling how a man with such essentially commonplace physiognomy as Adolph Schackelgruber achieved such historic prominence.

EARLY CHRISTMAS FEASTS

Christmas feasting in the present day is pallid compared to what it was in days gone by. Turkey was first introduced in England about 1520 as a mild substitute for the traditional boar's head garlanded with rosemary and laurel. The exotic roasted peacock was also a favourite at early feasts.

Since pie was eaten in the 16th century as a symbol of the riches thought by the three wise men. It was filled with rich spices and products brought from the Far East.
