EASTER BONNET

It was such a pretty bonnet. With ribbons bright and gay. A flower here, a flower there. Just like the month of May. She wore it oh, so nicely Upon her silvery hair. This lady old and lonely. A vision sweet and fair. And each one stopped to look at her. A smile upon her face. To see that Easter bonnet. And her gown touched up with lace.

For it was Easter morning. The church bells loudly pealed. The choir sang, the organ played. The congregation knelt. But soon the church door opened. And homeward she was bound. Each one stood and watched her. As she smiled and glanced around. For 'twas such a pretty bonnet. On this lady old and gay. Till another Easter rolls around. May God bless her this day. They Could Build Homes For People

We haven't jobs and we haven't houses for immigrants, some labor officials told Ottawa the other day. That just doesn't make sense declares the Financial Post. If we haven't the houses then we certainly have the jobs.

Let's bring in these people and let them go to work building houses if the unions will let them. A lot of unskilled labor could be used in that sort of work and many of the immigrants we could get know something about the building trades anyway.

By the time they finished the necessary houses these people will have learned enough of our language, customs and resources to develop other job opportunities providing work for themselves and for many Canadian-born as well.

PULP, PAPER LEADS

Post-war expansion of Bowater's Corner Brook newsprint mill, has helped to boost the tenth province's pulp and paper industry into the lead in export and product value. Fish, which held top spot for years, is now in second place, with mining third.

Sunday School Lesson

SUNDAY, MARCH 25th, 1951 Golden Text.—Lo, I am with you always. Math. 28:20.

Lesson Text.—Mk. 15:33-37; 16:1-7.

EXPOSITION I.—Jesus our Substitute, 15:33-37. Jesus had been hanging on the cross three hours, exposed to the gaze and ridicule of the priests, soldiers and mob, and now God draws a curtain over the scene.

When Christ was born "the glory of the Lord" shined upon the earth turned night into day; when He died God veiled the sun and turned day into night. The darkness was supernatural. It could not have been occasioned by an eclipse, for the passover moon was at its full. It was one of the many illustrations of the sympathy between nature and man (Rom. 8:20, 21).

"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Again is the prophetic picture (Ps. 22:1) realized. Jesus has taken the sinner's place (2 Cor. 5:21; 1 Pet. 2:24)—forsaken of God (Mk. 3:4). There was never a man that clung to God as Jesus did, and never one who was so forsaken, but not for His own sins (Isa. 53:6). He is conscious of personal innocence, while suffering for the sinner. It was soon "finished" (Jno. 19:30) and the cloud passes by and faith shines forth triumphant, and again He cries out with a loud voice no longer "My God," but "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," and He "gave up the ghost." No man took His life away from Him, but He laid it down of Himself (Jno. 10:18) willingly, gladly for the sake of the sheep. The way into the holy place was now made manifest (Heb. 9:7, 8) even "through the veil, that is to say, his flesh" (Heb. 10:19, 20). No longer was there access to the High Priest alone once a year, but the humblest believer might have boldness to enter "by the blood of Jesus."

II. The Day of Resurrection, 16:1-7. The Jewish Sabbath ended Saturday at sunset. As soon as the day was over, the shops opened and Mary Magdalene and her friends bought spices that they might come the next morning and anoint the dead body of Jesus. It seems from Matthew's account that they also made a brief visit to the tomb on Saturday night (Matt. 28:1). To get the full story of the resurrection one must read the four accounts given in Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, also Paul's account in 1 Corinthians 15:3-8. These accounts not only differ from one another, but seem sometimes to contradict one another. There is a real and very wonderful agreement but it only comes out after very careful and prolonged study.

The women started for the tomb while it was yet dark (Jno. 20:1). Mary hurried on ahead of the other women, reached the tomb before the sun had risen (Jno. 20:1). The other women reached the tomb at early dawn (v. 2; Luke 24:1). The love of these women for their Lord, whom they fancied dead, brought them thus early to His sepulchre to perform for Him the last service in their power.

The reason why they did not know that He had left the sepulchre was that they had not listened to and pondered His own words; this is the reason why we do not know many things about our Lord which we ought to know. None of the men were at the tomb; not because of their superior knowledge but their inferior love. When told that the Lord had risen they did not believe (Luke 24:11; Mk. 16:10, 11). The women appear in a better light than the men in the story Mary Magdalene was the leader of the women (cf. Matt. 28:1) as she had had so much done for her (Luke 8:2) she became the leader in love and in ministries. The depth and genuineness and unselfishness of their love are seen in their going to serve Jesus at the time when their faith was blighted and they had nothing more to expect from Him (1 Cor. 13:8).

As they drew nigh the tomb they recalled the great stone at its mouth (v. 3). If they had been more practical, they might have thought of it before, but the practical, cool-headed common sense that foresees all difficulties and therefore sits down and does nothing does not accomplish as much in this world as the uncalculating, impetuous love that follows its own impulses and plunges ahead and risks the difficulties. God did not roll away the stone for Jesus to get out, but for the women to get in. There is reason to suppose that Jesus had been out for hours, arising and leaving the tomb just at the beginning of the first day of the week, i. e., at sunset Saturday evening, thus passing just three days and three nights in the tomb (Luke 24:31).

When Mary returned to the tomb from the city, the two angels were sitting, one at the head and one at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain (Jno. 20:12). The women were overwhelmed with perplexity. If they had not forgotten Jesus' words, the true solution would have occurred to them at once. The angel gives it in one of the gladdest messages this old world ever heard, "He is risen; he is not here." He bids them see for themselves and then go tell.

There is a wonderful touch of tenderness in the "and Peter." Why "and Peter?" Was not Peter one of the disciples? Yes, the leader of the company, BUT Peter had denied the Lord three times with oaths and curses; and if the message had just come to the "disciple," poor, broken-hearted, back-slidden Peter, would he have thought he was not included—it is deeply significant that this little touch is found only in the Gospel of Mark, which by common consent is Peter's Gospel, Mark acting as amanuensis.

OIL BOOM

Western Canada's oil industry is expanding so rapidly, this year writes Gordon Grant from Calgary in The Financial Post that two dollars is expected to be spent on exploration, well drilling, etc., for every dollar "brought to surface" in the form of oil.

And this huge rate of capital expenditure—estimated at $150 millions per annum—is entirely exclusive of other great related expenditures: $90 millions for pipeline facilities; $80 millions for additional prairie refining capacity; $8 millions for new tankers.

PLASMA FROM SEAWEED

British scientists have evolved a method for producing blood plasma from seaweed. Named Laminarin, one ton is produced from about 100 tons of seaweed.

BABY FOODS

Canned infant foods were virtually unknown 20 years ago but from a small beginning they have developed into a business estimated to return more than $5 millions annually to Canadian farmers and food processors, says an American company.

WARMED POLISH

You can do a better job with furniture polish if you warm it up first. Just place the bottle in hot water until the contents are warm. Wood is more quickly penetrated by a warm solution.
