"MY PANSIES"

It was a lovely picture; That Fairy, just past four; Who stood, there in my garden, Its wonders to explore.

The Fairy was a fair haired child With dress of Heavenly Blue; She stood beside my pansy bed, Which wore colours of every hue.

She viewed the bed with rapture, And then with voice so sweet; 'Auntic! Come and see the wee faces.

And she knelt there at their feet. Those are my "Pansion", darling, explained to her with case; 'Aren't they pretty faces?" "Auntle,

Can I have some for my garden.

HIGHER BANK INTEREST?

Reports that some of the larger U.S. savings banks are considering paying higher interest rates on savings deposits is unlikely to find any reflection in Canada, The Financial Post learns.

Record Some Wills In Queerest Places

The queerest will ever was tattooed on a sailor's back with a signature on his thigh, properly attested and quite legal. Probably the simplest will was penned by a High Court judge on a half-sheet of notepaper, bequeathing £500,000. The longest will was a 95,000 word epic penned by a woman who And now she has returned to her eventually made her will the whole

> With the ponderous manuscript constantly at her side, friends thought she was working on a novel. Having codicil after codicil, it gave directions for the distribution of over £1,000,000. Unfortunately she left only £20,583, and the courts took years to clear up the muddle. More successful was the 20,000-word will of Sir John Ellerman. A model of clarity it even had an index to the various sections and disposed of over £38,000,-

Then there was the industrialist who set his £200,000 fortune in order with fourteen words scrawled on a sixpenny will form; and Sir Henry Hamilton's famous nineword entailment, "To my wife; after her decease, to my daughtor." Equally concise was a sailor's will, written on an eggshell, "To May, Everything I possess."

A Liverpool ship owner made his rical system or modernization o will on the linkng of his hat A A woman painstakingly wove her last Fencing, drainage, land improvedirections into a tapestry. Wills have been written on flour bags; Purchase of electrical equipment scratched in watches or even insuch as milking machines, cream socilarit on wallpaper, A solicitor ing on Windermere managed to Do you need any of these imsupport' himself for a time, and, provements? a few words with a penknife. Unfortunately, the will was upset, for it was never-properly witnessed. In the vaults of Somerset House, the last resting place of over 50,000,000 wills, are such oddities as a will chalked on a door and another written on an improvised sail of a raft by a seaman torpedoed in the Atlantic. Mortally wounded in the Pacific, on American soldier scribbled his bequests on the cuff of a nurse's war a cat belonging to a naval will be a new feature at the big uniform. > .A Birmingham business man not only made an orthodox will in writing, but also accompanied it with a sound film, showing him reading the will and adding a few forthright remarks on the faults and virtues of his heirs. Just as troublesome to the executors was a man whose will took five years to open. He had placed it in a complicated series of envelopes, the outer one marked "To be opened six weeks after my death", the next inscribed, "To be opened a year after", and so on. ' .

Count Tolstoy wrote his will on the stump of a tree. Nelson made codicile in his diary. Wills have teen made in esperanto and in shorthand, and have been successfully made by gramaphone record. complete with signatures scratched of the label.

QUEER PEOPLE, THESE SWISS

Something incredible seems to have happened in Switzerland, observes The Financial Post. Politiccans the world over must be shaking their heads.

Like our own Mr. Abbott, the tax collector in one of the Swiss cantons found himself with quite a nice surplus. One can readily imagine what might happen if a similar thing occurred anywhere else but in Switzerland. What a chance to buy another slice of pie-in-thesky What about some nice new city halls, post offices, court houses, or other public works. If necessary, of course, the boys could holst their own salaries a bit.

Whether some of those Swiss legislators were tempted is not reported At any rate they decided that the tax money should not be spent for any purpose other than that for which it had been levied The surplus therefore as to be distributed as a refund to the taxpayers of the cantons
