Chronicles

Ginger Farm

Written Specially for the Acton Free Press by Gwendoline P. Clarke

All last week I was hoping against hope to pay a visit to the Royal Winter Fair—and every day that possibility grew dimmer and dimmer. How could I leave home when we had a bricklayer here rebuilding our huge kitchen chimney, and of course having his dinners here. Partner wouldn't be around all the time—he was too busy at the barn—so I had to be on call to give any information that was required. That was from Monday to Friday inclusive... and they came the clearing up.

Partner had the scaffolding and a pile of sooty bricks to cart away while I had dust and smut to contend with in the house. But, after giving the order over a year ago, we at last have a chimney that doesn't let in daylight through the bricks and doesn't puff out smoke every few minutes if a west wind is blowing. That has been happening for years. But our new chimney is quite a bit higher than the old one so it doesn't catch the draught from the main roof of the house.

On Saturday, while there was still plenty to do, along came Bob. The remainder of the lumber was moved in a hurry—and then we went to the big Fair, taking two of our neighbours along with us. Partner did not want to go, so we left him to enjoy his hockey broadcast.

From the Fair I phoned Daughter to discover that she had been trying to get me by long distance all afternoon. Partner's brother Colin was at her house, en route for the farm. It all fitted in nicely like pieces of a jig-saw puzzle. We collected Colin after the Fair and brought him home with us. But it could so easily have happened otherwise.

Even if Daughter had not been speaking to me Colin intended coming out on the midnight train. Neither of them remembered that on Saturdays there is no midnight train!

We had a grand time at the Royal—walked miles looking at horses, cattle, pigs, sheep and poultry. Friends of ours from Montreal were showing eight head of beef cattle—so we had a visit with them—but we steered clear of the huge bull that they were prettying up for the show ring. As we walked through the barns we wondered how many millions of dollars were there on the hoof. The sum total must have been colossal.

In the Jersey barn a little boy, probably about five, came running up to us. "Look," he said, "there's a baby calf over there—just 15 minutes old... and down there, there's four more babies, all in one pen." We were amused... the little boy was so excited and wanted everyone to see what he had seen. And the calves were certainly cute enough to please anyone—just as cute as the little Ayrshire that was born in our own barn last night.

The horses were grand. Now that we work only with tractors, trucks, combines and balers it was nice to walk through the stables and to realize that horses did still exist. We were conscious of a slight nostalgia for the good old farming days when farming was a way of living rather than a way to make a living, which was more or less incidental. How we used to love our horses! I don't see how anyone can become really attached to a tractor—not in the way one gets attached to a team of horses. And yet, loving horses, we must still work with tractors... for us there is no other way.

The commercial exhibits were interesting if only as a demonstration of the ease with which one can spend money! The mechanized check feeder left me cold... a slow automatic self-feeding trough. When I raise chicks I enjoy watching and feeding them. I had to get acquainted with my little buddies. And they with me. I like to have them come running eagerly. I come in within sight and sound. But there was one gadget that was entirely to my liking, an electric egg-washer. Eggs are placed in a huge wire basket and the basket

SURE, a trim new Buick makes a mighty pretty picture when you see it in your driveway, or watch it wheel by. But if you could get a mechanic's-eye view of this big, broad beauty as it sits on a lift, you'd see an impressive picture of rugged brawn that makes Buicks give such a good account of themselves on the road. You'd see the full-length torque-tube drive that firms the whole power relay system, and steadies your going like a giant hand beneath you. You'd see all four wheels cushioned by stout coil springs that are completely service-free, practically breakproof—and a principal reason for the ever-level Buick ride. But mainly, you'd see the massive foundation that backbones every Buick—the deep, wide, X-member frame that's rugged as a rock, and a brute for strength. So when you look at the beauty of a Buick—the big mileage power of its valve-in-head Fireball Engine—and the money saving ability of its Dynaflo Drive—don't overlook the tough stamina that goes with it all. And whether you're looking at a Buick CUSTOM, a Buick SUPER or a mighty ROADMASTER, don't overlook the fact
