Trout fishing season is due to open a week from Thursday Anglers from this district have been looking forward to opening day since the first signs of the their cones never hang down but spring break-up, appeared, tying flys, oiling reels and flexing poles as well as day dreaming of the moment when they can step into that turbulent spring creek or placid pool for their first trout. Generally the creeks are too full the first couple of weeks and roads to the remote creeks broken up by the spring thaw. Usually it's well on into May before the best fishing Trout streams in this end of the county, once bountifully stocked, have been depleted in the last decade by pollution, presence of bigger predatory species, and an overabundance of fishermen. However, good news for the Acton district was the news that Dudley Hitchcox, county game warden, had put 800 speckled trout and 1,500 brown trout yearlings in the Black Creek here. Also earmarked to be stocked are Sixteen Mile Creek at Milton and the Credit near Georgetown Long a fishermen's paradise, the Black Creek had a sudden demise when the Beardmore filter beds went over their banks one very wet spring day five or six years ago, wiping out the biggest part of the population of fish. Since then the creek has been in such a state as to make the presence of any kind' of marine life even the lowly sucker; highly improbable It is hard to believe the polluted water has undergone a transformation in the last couple of years to make it suitable for fish, especially trout.

ACTON PEOPLE AND ACTON

PLACES THROUGH MANY YEARS

An incident of Matthew's Hall comes to memory. It was here political meetings were held in the early days. When D. B. Chiaholm was the candidate against Dr. Robertson, I think, he was holding forth and as usual endeavoring to impress the farmers of his interest in their welfare. He declared: "I am a native of Halton county; in fact, I was born between two rows of corn." Immediately a wellknown Irishman heckled, "A punkin head, be jappers." D. B.

lost the crowd, and eventually lost the election. The Post Office occupied that building that used to stand on the site of the present Bank of Nova Scotia. The building was used as a post office until the present government building was erected. It was used as the recruiting station for the Acton soldiers in 1915-16.
