See Real Cereal Differences: Quiz

What's in a variety? Quite a lot, say cereal experts of the Canada Department of Agriculture. And they suggest considering the following before deciding the cereal variety most suited to your farming needs.

Is it adapted to local and climatic conditions?
Is the crop to be consumed on the farm as feed or disposed of as seed or for some other purpose on the open market?
Is it capable of resisting possible loss from disease, lodging, etc.?
Is it suitable as a nurse crop in seeding down grasses and clovers?
Does its maturity fit in with general farm operations?
Is it suitable to the modern methods of harvesting?
Does it thresh satisfactorily?
Does it sprout easily in the stock when subjected to wet conditions?
Is the quality of the grain satisfactory?

Many of these points are overlooked when choosing a variety, the cerealists say, but all may be important when full consideration is given to the dollar value of the crop per acre.

The adaptability of a variety for a particular farm should be considered in the light of what use is to be made of the crop. For example, a variety low in tillering with short straw and early maturity may be more suited as a nurse crop. On the other hand, a variety which produces an abundance of straw is desirable where straw is needed on the farm.

In some crops, ease of threshing may be considered a rather important character, particularly with wheat and barley, and maturity may be of importance in arranging for a better distribution of labor during harvest.

Plant breeders are working to develop new varieties that will meet the needs of growers in every part of the country and which will resist as many of the natural hazards as possible. Farmers should not overlook the possibility of increasing their acre value by failing to keep in touch with developments of new varieties.

In First Shipment To S.A. Since Ban

The first shipment of Canadian cattle to leave for South America since the foot and mouth outbreak last February took to the air at Malton Airport on September 8. It consisted of 11 richly bred Holstein bulls including the Junior Champion at the recent C.N.E.

The flight marked the first time that a Chilean plane, either commercial or military, had ever visited Canada. In fact, it is the first South American commercial plane to pick up a cargo at Malton for several years. The 11 bulls included one from the U.S.A. and were purchased for the Institute of Inter-American Relations by Ismael Jordan of Santiago. Assisting in making the selection was Dr. Guillermo Gomez, head of the Animal Husbandry Department of the Chilean Ministry of Agriculture. Five head were from Roscoe Farms, Brampton Ont.; two each from J. E. McCague, Alliston, Ont. and Hays Ltd., Oakville Ont. and one each from G. Leslie Peck & Son, Milton, Ont. and Butterfield Farms, Mexico, N.Y.

ALL APOLOGIES

His car and her car met head on. Both drivers got out and, with fine courtesy so characteristic of motorists nowadays, both began to apologize profusely.

"I'm so sorry," said the woman. "It was all my fault."

"Not at all, madam," the man responded with gallantry. "I was to blame myself."

"But I insist the fault was mine. I was on your side of the road."

"That may be true, but my dear madam, I am responsible for the collision. I saw you coming blocks away, and I had ample opportunity to dart down a side street."

Vital Accessories Can Catch the Eye

Weddings can increase in beauty with fine accessories.

One of these accessories, well printed invitations, has always been taken care of by the printing department of this newspaper.

Now however, there is even more to offer brides-who come to this office for their orders.

As well as invitations beginning this week orders will be taken for specially printed match boxes and paper serviettes. The serviettes are of various sizes and the printing may be of specified color, making the service adaptable for golden, weddings, birthday parties, group parties or any special event where these attractive accessories may add to the setting.

For the bride there are serviettes with silver bells and names and date will be printed in silver. Match boxes, printed with the name of local householders, will be fun to have anytime and to give to guests who remark about them. They make novel gifts, too.
