Phone 230, Acton

Hello Homemaker! Fall with its orange, bronze and russet coloring, and its crisp stimulating air makes it necessary to cope with the most ambitious appetites.

The garden produce is still in abundance, especially the onions, pumpkin, sprouts, squash and other vegetables that add interest as well as a little more of that "staying" quality.

Baked Onions

Skin medium-sized onions. Pierce the side of each with a darning needle. Boil the onions until tender. Drain and core with an apple corer. Fill centres with a mixture of half crumbs and half grated cheese. Season with salt and paprika. Place in baking dish. Add 1/2 inch of potato water or soup. Cover and bake at 375 degs. for about 30 mins. Remove cover and bake another 5 minutes.

Baked Eggplant

6 tomatoes
1/4 cup onion
1/4 cup sweet pepper
1/4 tsp. brown sugar
salt
paprika
1 eggplant, sliced
butter

Cut tomatoes in thick slices leaving skin on. Place tomatoes in a greased casserole. Sprinkle the mixture of minced onion, green pepper, brown sugar, salt and paprika over them. In another pan place sliced eggplant dotted with butter. Bake in preheated oven for 30 mins. Make toast. Serve a slice of eggplant on slice of toast topped with sliced tomato.

Tomato-Corn-Cheese

1 green pepper
1 small onion
2 tbsps. butter
1 cup cooked tomatoes
3/4 cup corn
2 tbsps. tapiocha
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
few cayenne
1 1/2 cups grated cheese
Seed and chop green pepper. Skin and chop onion. Melt butter and brown vegetables until brown. Heat tomatoes and corn in double boiler, then add peppers and onion and remaining ingredients. Cook for 5 to 7 mins. Serves 5.

Squash-Pineapple Dessert

1 medium squash
brown sugar
1/4 cup crushed pineapple
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup orange juice
grated orange rind
butter

Cut squash and seed. Place pieces in a covered colander and steam over boiling water until nearly tender. Peel squash and cut in 1/2 inch cubes. Place squash and pineapple in alternate layers, sprinkling each layer with sugar and salt. Add orange rind and juice. Dot generously with butter. Bake at 350 degs. for 50 minutes.

Pumpkin Pie

1 1/2 cups pumpkin
2 egg yolks
3/4 cup brown sugar
1/2 tsp. ginger
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup cream
2 tbsps. lemon juice
1/2 tsp. salt
2 egg whites, beaten

Line a 9-inch (or two 7-inch) pie plate with pre-prepare pumpkin by cutting a medium sized one in half; remove seeds and fibres; then bake shell side up in a pan placed in a moderate oven until tender.

Mash pumpkin pulp. Add beaten egg yolks, sugar, spices, milk, cream and lemon juice. Fold in beaten egg whites to which salt has been added. Pour into shell. Bake at 450 degs. for 15 mins., then reset temperature to 325 degs. and continue baking 30 minutes.

TAKE A TIP

1-To prepare onions—pour boiling water over them and let stand 2 minutes. Drain and skin them under cold water.

2-To French fry onions, cut them crosswise in 1/2 inch thick slices. Combine 1/2 cup milk and 1/4 cup water and soak sliced onions in it for 1/2 hour. Drain onions spread them on absorbent paper and dredge with flour. Season with salt and paprika. Fry in deep fat at 350 degrees until brown. Keep turning them in a 1/2 inch deep fat.

3-Green peppers may be skinned by placing in a hot oven for 3 to 5 minutes.

4-Boiled sweet peppers may be served as a vegetable if peppered up with a well-seasoned sauce or a can of condensed celery soup.

We're Still Incas Here in Canada

Canadians put the accent on youth. Individually and collectively we hate to think that our population is aging. Offices and factories "retire" employees at 65 or even 60 on the theory that their working days are over. Pensions, whether provided by the government, by private employers, or from personal saving are the security our society offers men and women beyond retirement age.

According to Dr. Martin Gumpert, in the Reader's Digest, this is out-dated thinking. Dr. Gumpert recalls that the great Inca civilization prescribed certain occupations for certain ages regardless of individual abilities. This rigidity, he implies, may have had something to do with the downfall of the Incas. He believes our arbitrary retirement policy is dangerous in two respects: it ignores present-day vital statistics, and it is medically unrealistic.

First, the article points out our present concept of retirement seems to be based on what the average life expectancy was in 1900 (about 48 years). To-day life expectancy has climbed to 76 years for men and 70 for women. By 1975, the average period between retirement and death will be about ten years—or three times longer than in 1900.

The second point made by Dr. Gumpert is that the shrinking dollar makes a mockery of pension plans. None of the "security" programs can provide full maintenance under current conditions for the lengthening term of retirement.

The stark facts, writes Dr. Gumpert, are that our old people are going to have to work.

Furthermore, "our old people" are qualified to work, prefer to work and have much invaluable experience and talent to offer.

The implication of this article is that it's time we stopped being Incas.

Annual value of the tourist industry to Huronia is estimated at $15 million and it is the district's second biggest industry, being surpassed only by farming.

FRATERNITY VILLAGE

by Ben Ames Williams

While some of Ben Ames Williams' novels have been seen in town on sale in pocket editions, judging from the front jackets and back jacket blurbs, his "Fraternity Village" is a little above.

"Fraternity Village" is a collection of short stories about the folks and do-ings in a fictitious Maine town.

The first stories about Fraternity were written about thirty years ago, and published separately in several publications — Saturday Evening Post and Collier's and The Country Gentleman among them.

This collection was published by request.

Says Mr. Williams himself in his preface: "The great majority of the published Fraternity stories had a minimum of plot, depending for their primary interest on local color and character." And throughout the selections in the book, local color and local characters — "characters" in the modern sense of the word, too—are the prime attraction.

The town featured a big stove in the middle of the street where the men gathered to smoke and talk over favorite tales. One of these tales is about the timid clerk in the general store who was robbed of a wagonload of supplies one night out in the country. Something lit up inside the clerk and he fit out — right after the criminals. Then he didn't want — it was his goods. By the time he caught them, single handed the goods were not in any shape for re-sale, but he found himself the object of more reverent remarks from them on.

"Certainly," Mr. Williams ends this tale for around the stove, what that boy did that night and day in Whitcher Swamp, was either ridiculous or sublime."

Well, that's the general tenor of Fraternity Village stories. Part ridiculous, part sublime.
