A Correction Needed

Motorists who have occasion to approach Main Street and the highway from the West Bower Avenue wonder how long that sign put up for highway safety is going to be allowed to remain in its present position. The view of traffic approaching from the east is almost an impossibility. Moving the sign 10 or 15 feet south would give just as much protection to the children of Acton and would certainly make the corner a safer one for travel.

We do not know who was responsible for the placing of the sign. Like those who placed it, we at first thought the location was good. But after coming to the corner in a car several times and attempting to get a clear view of the highway we can see no good reason for leaving the mistaken location of the sign until an accident occurs.

In the interests of the safety of all, the sign denoting School Children Crossing at the corner of Main and West Bower Ave. should be moved. Perhaps lowering it to the ground as has been done with another sign would help the motorists' visibility until another location can be arranged.

Beyond Their Depth

Canadian schools are wandering too far out of their territory, says Dr. J. B. Kirkpatrick of McGill University. They are attempting to teach a lot of things not directly associated with formal education, and as a result are in danger of falling down in their regular work, he thinks. A great many people in this country will certainly agree with that criticism, says The Financial Post.

At present far too many students are getting merely a smattering of this and a smattering of that. When they are through they are neither good cooks nor good spellers; they can't put up a kitchen shelf, nor add up a bridge score.

Very few parents have the training or time to teach their children the three r's. This job, very wisely, we have turned over to properly trained professionals. But there is other training that can only be provided in the home and if our young people are not going to get it there then the whole nation will suffer.

Last week the weather was too wet; then it was too hot; but as the old song used to go we're going to have weather, whether or

School's Out

This week all school children start the long summer vacation. Some of them have already started. Most of us can remember the joy there was when the final bell rang and books were taken home and forgotten and everyone shouted Hurrah for holidays. We don't believe the exuberance of youth has changed much down through the years when it comes to summer holidays.

There were always the summer chores to be done but there was a free and easy way of doing these helping tasks. Then there came the age when a summer job was looked forward to and of course the opportunity to earn some money of your own.

The jobs have changed with the times but the same funamental decisions and days of play come to the school children today as they have done down through the years that any of us can remember.

Other things have changed, too. Increased traffic and the motor cars have made the streets unsafe places for ball games or the hour or so of fun. The summer holiday period means too that motorists must watch more closely as they drive all the streets and highways where little groups may be starting out for a day's outing.

The days in which "School is Out" should be happy ones. A good resolve for all of us might well be to endeavol to keep them happy and have them all return to school's re-opening refreshed and the better for the fine summer days of leisure.

Skyline Improvement

In every town and hamlet of this province there ought to be one or more flags flying. Last week we travelled in the United States and in every centre Old Glory seemed to be visible in some place. We know many of the places were hot dog stands but in the public squares there always seemed to be a fine flag floating in the breeze.

It's not necessary to wait for a holiday or celebration to put up the flags. As we gaze about at the myriad of television towers which clutter the skyline we wonder if a good old Union Jack could not be attached to each of the long pipes that hold the aerial without any interference with reception on the set. We think such a fine lot of flags would enhance the skyline and when visitors come to Canada they would know what country they are touring.

Canada hasn't nearly enough flags on display. They add color to the land and proclaim to all a pride in the land of our choice.

New dwelling units started this year are recently running 52 per cent higher than the same period last year, according to The Financial Post.

Not Through Highways

We were glad to hear the announcement of an official of the Highways Department that express highways were not going to be cluttered up with roadside stands and other attractions.

We are simply throwing money away when an to her parents in Georgetown, law its third reading and final we buy expensive right-of-way and build roads capable of handling high-speed traffic safely and lemployee, she flew to London Monthen allowing them to be hopelessly cluttered day afternoon, hunted for accommowith local traffic and local business. There is not any sense in spending millions of money in cutting down grades, hills and curves if traffic is going to be reduced to a crawl in any case.

way routing are to be found in Ontario at Burlington Beach and at Sunnyside in Toronto. Amusement parks are located on both sides of a highway carrying four lines of traffic. Every because our region didn't close until week-end and during the summer months when 7. motor traffic is heaviest the greatest number of people swarm these places down by the waterfront. We think they have a perfect right to be there. The beaches were in use and built up long before express highways were in use.

Now traffic piles up at both ends of the (there was oodles of room) and we beaches for miles and crawls at a snail's pace. Both motorists and pleasure seekers are made unhappy by the situation. A first item on the highway program should be to clean up these two couldn't get wet except on the top badly planned express highways in Ontario and remove them from the summer playground area.

We hear a great deal about the highway ac- law-or at least will have once a cidents and they are deplorable. But considering | slight technicality has been overthe number of motor vehicles on the roads and has been appointed and, according the speed of travel it is a marvel that there are not to the by-law, prosecutions may more accidents. During the week-end we made a motor trip of several hundred miles. We didn't chimneys or even bonfires! even see a scratched fender or fender bumpedalthough traffic moved almost bumper to bumper in the section along Burlington Beach.

. The only example we saw of poor driving in fact was one chap on a divided highway of four lanes who insisted on keeping in the centre lane and having faster cars pass him on the wrong side. He was eventually nudged over, however, by a motorist who came dangerously close behind him and after repeated horn blowing persuaded him to get in his right line.

The motor car today is a marvel of mechanical manoeuverability. Considering the great number of drivers of all degrees of knowledge about driving there seems a minimum number of machines on the road having mechanical difficulties. Even the trouble does not seem as frequent as it used to be It may be that motorists have learned that the best way to have enjoyable travel is to have the mechanical defects attended to before starting on the road Garages have apparently sold their services effectively.

EXAMINATIONS HERALD SCHOOL END FOR SOME THE WORK LIFE NOW BEGINS

The care-free days of the vacationing atudent are now upon us. The examinations for the high school students are almost completed. For many of those who sweated out the examinations, this year may be the last. may quite possibly be that most will seek other fields of endeavor leading to their life-long work.

I started to wonder just what that would mean looking back on my own experience. Like many, I never was in love with school, and despite the admonition of more mature minds that school days were the best, I have yet to regret the end of my formal education.

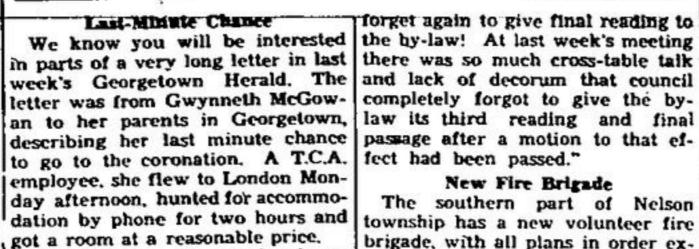

To-day in Acton High School there must be some who will look on the end of formal schooling as a new found freedom. It isn't. You will never find release from responsibility and if you do you will find little enjoyment in it.

Is Acton a good place for the student who has finished some particular stage of High School? Acton is essentially an industrial centre. I presume wages are on a level/comparable with other industry. But then wages aren't the only thing one should work for. There should be a satisfaction gained from the work one spends five days a week doing. There should be some sense of pride in seeking to do the best job possible.

Shorter work weeks and shorter hours have suggested that work is something to do as little of as possible. That can be traced back to the fact that the Industrial Revolution introduced many machines, streamlining production and dividing it into many production-line operations with the worker seeing and experiencing little satisfaction in the completed product. He lost his individuality and with it went some craftsmanship.

Few are interested in learning a trade. Little wonder when higher wages for less work and less responsibility can be found without too much trouble. But there are many things for the retiring student to consider well before settling down in Acton or any other place, so think it over.

The huge new Burlington canal bridge may be started in the fall. Hon. George Doucett, minister of highways, has announced that the property for the approaches, 30 houses, has been purchased

Plans are soon to be finalized in Ottawa. One of the main points to be settled is whether pedestrians will be allowed, and whether the new bridge will be separate from the railway bridge or not
