Spring Renews Subdivision Problems for Town Council

Winter Storms Out With Snow, Sleet

Spring in the wind is speeding the pace of local subdivision activity this week as members of Council Monday night sailed into fresh problems attached to one current development and renewed considerations on other subdivisions due to move shortly.

Two representatives of Thomas Thomas Glenora subdivision committee presented a draft to the council Monday night. They ask for a change in the zoning by-law to allow a residential subdivision. The council members were divided on the issue. Some felt that the subdivision was in the best interests of the town, while others were concerned about the impact on the surrounding area. The council will meet again next week to discuss the matter further.
