Photos Inspire Decorating Ideas

Portrait photographs are staging a comeback. The latest news in home decoration is the part your cherished photographs can play in making your home more beautiful and friendly.

In grandmother's day, portrait photographs were prominently displayed in the family album or crowded on table and piano tops. But as interiors became less ornate, this custom went out of favor and portraits tended to disappear from sight altogether.

If you have none that you want to use, inexpensive frames of all kinds are for sale in the stores.

There's one main rule to follow: use your imagination. Many people prefer frames of uniform size, symmetrically arranged. Others like a variety of frames-carved, gilt, oval, round and square - to give their

And here's an added hint: if you don't care for glass, a clear coat of plastic spray or lacquer will preserve your portraits and potect them from dust. With imagination and very simple materials, you can resurrect your precious portraits and create a picture gallery of your own that will give you, your kiends and your family lasting enjoyment.
