Ontario Renovates Old Trading Post

TORONTO (CP) - Visitors to Wapiscogamy creek will soon admire the Hudson's Bay Company trading post there. It was abandoned long ago, but the Ontario Lands and Forests Department plans to renovate it, along with other posts in the Kapuskasing district.

These trading posts were founded more than 175 years ago, but most were abandoned before the turn of this century.

In conjunction with their restoration program, the department plans to set up an historical library of Ontario photographs, depicting everything from the province's townsites, mills and industries to period clothing and recreat-

.The history of one of the forts is described by C. P. Wilson, editor of "The Beaver," a magazine depicting Ontario's northland.

"During the summer of 1788, post, later known as the New Brunswick, was established on Micabanish lake, now called Brunswick lake . . . It was abandoned in the fall of 1791.

"It was re-established, however in 1800, and abandoned again in 1802, then re-established in 1805 for a year. Nothing remained of the fort in 1817 but the ditches and a few decayed stockades."

Shavings and Hay Insulate Iceberg

MONTREAL (CP)-Insulation of uncle, Mr. and Mrs. J. Holmes and an iceberg has made possible the reclamation for salvage of a fourengined aircraft that crash-landed 40 miles out in Hudson Bay in ver visited last week with her early May. The crew was rescued aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. M. shortly after the crash.

Amos Heacock, a salvage engineer from Seattle, Wash., passing through Montreal recently, explained how 5,000 bags of wood shavings and 10 carloads of hay were flown to the iceberg and spread over a circle with a 100-yard diameter around the plane to prevent the ice melting. The aircraft, a U.S. Overseas Airlines DC-4 engaged on an airlift for work on the early-warning radar by. Sharon and Mr. James Taylor line began to settle into the ice and of Guelph were visitors with Mr. salvage work had to be started and Mrs. F. Anderson on Sunday.

To top off their rosetinted vision, the speculators even gave the tent-settlement a new name, "Michipicoten City," but it didn't live up to its grandiose title. Since the boom never came, Michipicoten Mission never took the shape its planners had ordained and little attention was paid to the lines of the old plan. Streets followed the easiest wagon tracks through the bush; lot lines followed the exal

The visiting surveyor was apparently torn between legality and reality. Homeowners termed the results "confusing." Not one of the village's roads is in the same place as the new map shows it to be. Many don't even run in the same direction. It's the same with the old buildings: One property owner has been asked by the department to move a building because it is shown in the middle of a planned road which in fact does not exist. Buildings in a similar dilemma include the school. house, shown as situated far from the planned school property, and the church standing in the middle of the planned main road. Signs that the officials in Toronto actually believe in their plan aroused interest of Michipicoten Mission residents in their topayturvy situation. Result is a petition calling for a re-survey in accordance with the actual community. Copies of the petition have been sent to the department of lands and forests, C. Haryr Lions, MPP for Sault Ste. Marie riding, and Premier

Leslie Frost. Officials are challeng-
