Off With Old On With New

The old calendars are coming down with the records of 1955 tossed away and the bright new 1956 clean sheets with their promise of 366 days to be filled. The New Year resolutions have been made and the forecasts for business trends have been published. The plans and probabilities having been stated for the new year, there is always the doubt-not so much to their general application but rather as to how they will affect us individually.

Whether it be a new year, a new month or a new day, life for all of us is something that is charted but can not always be kept on course. Each new year and new day brings its challenges and its accomplishments or failures. But new starts and new beginnings thave a thrill that is always alluring. The past is gone and left its experiences behind. The unknown future lies ahead.

This year end and new year beginning has a significance which is important to all of us as we discard the old calendars and put up the bright new ones. To young folks, this year seems a long way into the future; to older folks, its days will go all too quickly. But whatever our age, 1956 is on the road with five days of it already expended.

Less Talk, More Action

The holiday record on our highways would seem to indicate that the warnings issued by the government departments required some application and less talk. Ontario's record of highway slaughter can be improved when the few motorists who refuse to obey traffic regulations are taken off the road.

The great majority of motorists are conscientious and careful. Just why their lives should be endangered by the few is difficult to understand. A governing body that collects the license fees, the gasoline tax and the tax on liquor should be financially responsible to eliminate the lawless few. Police officers on the whole are most anxious to enforce the law but too often are frustrated in the courts by technicalities and evasion of the penalty which is due the careless driver. The number of hit and run cases reported in Toronto over the New Year week-end would seem to indicate that many considered the easy procedure for themselves was to get away from the scene before police could lay a charge of impaired driving or intoxication. Ontario's highway record can be improved-not by warnings, but by law enforcement and less talk.

Exceeding Authority

If there are sufficient objectors, we might find that some of the numerous government boards are not essential and business might get back to normal trends as in the years before the last World War.

Recently the Milk Control Board of Ontario refused a license to a distributor on the ground that the "area involved is being adequately served." Whether or not that was so, said the Ontario Court of Appeals, was none of the Milk Board's business, and provided the new distributor meets the proper requirements in the way of experience, financial responsibility and equipment, it is entitled to a license.

Among other things in his jugdment, Mr. Justice Hogg pointed out that administrative boards, under the guise of regulation or control have "no right to prohibit a person from carrying on a business."

It was time that point was made clear. Far too many of these boards have been exceeding or attempting to exceed their authority.

or prevent any citizen risking his capital setting up in business if he chose to do so.

Machines and Humans

Thirty-eight years ago, we helped uncrate and assemble the first new Linetype to come into Halton County. These type-setting machines in those days were just starting to make their appearance in weekly newspapers, replacing the old method of hand-set type. To-day, of course, there is scarcely a newspaper of any size which doesn't use one or more of these intricate machines and every newspaper in Halton has at least two of them in operation.

Through all those years, that machine has never failed to produce type each week. For many years it produced all the machine-set type until another machine was added: It's had new parts added here and there and improvements occasionally put on for greater efficiency.

Last Friday as we watched it being loaded on a truck to go to Toronto where it will be thoroughly rebuilt, we had mixed feelings as it was lashed to the truck and started out for its renewal of usefulness. Machines, even though mechanical contraptions, can form an attachment that often borders on the human. Unfortunately, however, humans, unlike machines, cannot be shipped in and given another lease of new life every 38 years. After a few hours, we couldn't resist calling up the company and finding out if our faithful companion had arrived at its destination in good condition. It had and the mechanics had started the work of dismantling and adding new parts as were found essential.

While the machine is away, the remaining Linotype will do double duty and be operated day and night until its mate is returned and put in operation. But that spot looks awfully bare while it's away and we are going to be very glad to see its return; just as glad as we were 38 years ago when it started the new era in the county of setting type by machine.

Incidentally, the price of a new machine of similar usefulness to-day is four times the price of the machine that is being repaired and the work entailed and the replacement parts required on the old machine will cost approxim- ended recently in Winnipeg. Can- There it was rescued by some would be to refuse all United States ately as much as the original machine cost when ada has the Bible available in over British soldiers who sent it to Dr. silver. ## Brief Comment

New Year resolutions do not take as prominent a part at the opening of a new year as they did a few years ago.

The Editor and staff did appreciate sincerely the many kindly greetings that flooded in during the holiday season. Remembrance by friends old and new are things that improve as the years roll on. Our thanks to all.

The new motor vehicle license plates are now available and the white and blue will be replacing the blue and white. For some unexplained reason, they are going to cost more in 1956.

Of the Irishman who talked continuously for 133 hours, the St. Thomas Times-Journal points out: "This is the most stupid marathon yet, but he would be a valuable member of a political party that is staging a filibuşter in Parliament."

The credit squeeze which the Bank of Canada and the Government have been trying to impose on us has not been popular. Such policies of restraint never are. By the very nature of things, it's always more pleasant to keep on going up and up.

1956 IS HERE a fresh and youthful layout of days waiting to be utilized to their best-or to their worst-advantage. And whether you greet them with exuberance and optimism, like this worry-less young fellow, or with apathy and pessimism, could well determine the foibles and fortunes that will be yours in this new year.
