Clansmann Has More Booths

Several Mill St. businesses have been improving the appearance of their stores lately.

Just one day of quick work has completely changed about half of the Clansmann restaurant. Workmen took over the town's newest restaurant to install new booths and modernize the counter.

Now inside the front window are three booths, the seats covered in smart turquoise nylon plastic. Bamboo drapes are to come.

A new snack bar features dark green paneling and a central mirror, with shelves for dishes and glasses. There is a new display case and a new cigarette bar.

Each of the older booths is feeling the change, too. Excess, one has an individual record selector.

The front of Acton Home Furnishings has some redecorating underway. New facing will be placed above and below their large show window.

George Holloway's barber shop has had a facelift, with new brick facing along the front.

THE FOUR STURDY MAPLES in front of the Rumley Funeral Home gave way to progress this week. Little more than a day after this photo was taken all that remained was four dismembered trunks as the need for wider sidewalks, gas line installations and metal light standards dictated this noticeable change in the appearance of downtown Mill St. Town employees' axes and saws are starting work.

Chronicles of Ginger Farm

Written Specially for the Acton
Free Press by
Gwendolene P. Clarke

If we hadn't thought it before, we would certainly realize now that television is a great medium for education. How else could we have received such a clear picture of what takes place at the great party conventions in the U.S.A.?

Their system of preparing for the election of a government is so different from our own that it is sometimes a little difficult to understand. But now, I for one, certainly know more about it than I did before.

I might even offer a little criticism — but why bother? What our friends across the border do is entirely their own affair, so at Ginger Farm we can just sit back and remain interested onlookers. Of course, we got a little tired of some of the speeches but yet we couldn't drag ourselves away from the TV, particularly on Friday night. Of course, we would have to have done so had we been getting up with the dawn as we used to do.

From now on, many of those at the Democratic convention will be to us, not merely names in the news, but definite personalities. And that, of course, will apply to Republican candidates too, whose convention we shall watch with equal interest.

But we are glad we don't have to vote for either one side or the other. President Eisenhower has such a wonderful personality — but then we found ourselves equally impressed with Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Kefauver. But we don't have to make any decision so we can straddle the fence in comfort — if straddling a fence can ever be described as comfortable.

Altogether, newswise, last week was quite exciting. The "Suez Crisis" reference, and if it isn't incongruous to mention it in the same paragraph Cliff Lumsden's conquest of the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

And I had a special little outing of my own. Just another interesting Women's Institute affair. This time it was a tea and the exhibit of prize winning entries in connection with the annual competition sponsored by the Salada Tea Company.

There were three Tweedsmuir History scrapbooks shown, all of them good, but that of Bridgeport W.I. in the Kitchener-Waterloo district was deservedly awarded the first prize. Such beautiful illustrations featuring pioneer scenes they appeared to be three-dimensional. There were also wonderful black and white sketches by Mrs. Idessa Zimmerman. The entire book was well arranged and tabulated.

Another splendid prize-winning entry was from Haystack Bay W.I. The distinguishing feature in this book was the remarkable attractive handwritten entries. I have been wondering since whether it was illic handwriting.

The third prize history was in two volumes. It, too, was a carefully arranged and attractive piece of work. There were also three beautiful oil paintings of rural scenes, and three prize-winning Hope chests which included very fine specimens of crochet, cross-stitch work and other types of embroidery.

All these entries were conclusive evidence of the talent that exists among the Women's Institutes of Ontario. Of course we were welcomed by officials of the Salada Tea Company, after which we were served piping hot tea, dainty sandwiches and fancy cakes. I expect this tea was probably the last function at which the Provincial officers of the W.I. will appear before leaving Canada on their way to Ceylon and the Triennial Convention of the Associated Countrywomen of the World, taking place this fall.

Well, we hear on the radio that harvest operations in Ontario are pretty well over. We wonder where in this district most of the wheat has certainly been threshed or combined but spring crops are still standing — and I expect most of the farmers with spring crops are praying that no big storm comes along and knocks them flat before they are ready for the binder. In fact, we know of some farms where the crops have already suffered that fate.

We get such freakish storms these days. Saturday we had just a sprinkle of rain. Later when Bob came up from Oakville he reported the heaviest rainstorm of the summer with a terrific electrical storm. At the construction plant, lightning ran along steel pipes, jumped from one machine to another, gave all the employees a scare and yet no damage was reported anywhere.

Today the weather is delightfully cool. In fact, there is a feeling of Fall in the air. The wind has a mournful sighing sound; bluejays are sounding forth with loud, unmusical notes and last night there was a gorgeous sunset, unusual for summer evenings.

I suppose we might learn more about what the weather has in store for us if we had a greater knowledge concerning plants and trees. For instance, we have a hickory tree down by the creek that is loaded with nuts this year. We wonder why because we haven't had hickory nuts around here for years and years. There are also quite a lot of wild grapes on vines where I have never seen grapes before.

There are plenty of choke-berries, too. Last year there wasn't one to be seen anywhere. Why? No doubt, native Indians could tell us.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Mary Langford Interred at Fairview

Funeral was held from the Rumley Funeral Home in Acton for Mrs. Mary Langford who died suddenly at her home in Rockwood after a prolonged illness. Her husband, Thomas Langford, predeceased her in 1912. After their marriage the couple moved to Baysville.

Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Langford returned to Nassagaweya township. She was a devoted and faithful member of the United Church and the Women's Missionary Society.

Services were conducted by Rev. J. Dilts of Rockwood, assisted by Rev. D. Black, of the Presbyterian church. Pallbearers were F. Day and A. McPhedran, of Rockwood; E. Wilson of Eden Mills; C. Wilson, D. Moffat and V. Synnot of Nassagaweya.

Interment was in Fairview cemetery, Acton.
