have to be taken into current revenue and used the following year in reducing the mill rate. There appeared no provision for building up a reserve.

The subdivision agreement presently in force in North York was reviewed including sidewalks, paved roads, street lights and sewer and water. A fee of $5 per foot frontage for sewer treatment plant facilities is also charged to the developer.

The possibility of an agreement requiring the procuring of a certain percentage industrial development to match residential development was also reviewed. The planning consultant pointed out that this type of agreement was not successful.

It was emphasized that whatever the builder or developer puts in is automatically added to the price of the house that the purchaser pays.

Looking over the town, it was estimated 200 lots remained and in a view of normal development 80 might be built on Council members noted that there could be built in one year which would put the town in a bad position.

Members indicated concern about trying to obtain concessions from present developers. The only grounds on which permits might be refused, the consultant suggested would be if it would seriously affect the sewer treatment facilities.

The program was left with the planning consultant to draft a possible agreement and submit it if it is.

Looking to the future, it was also suggested there was a considerable lack of land in town for industrial development. The consultant suggested that if annexation was considered it should be approached with caution and a complete study to determine the area within which the town is liable to provide services. The effect on the tax structure of the town and the economy of the town should also be reviewed.

Mr. Deacon suggested the first requisite was completion of the zoning by-law and after that the planning board might be able to carry out such a study over a period of time.
