Nuclear weapons tests have become a more intense question in dispute in international affairs. West Germany's lower house of parliament at Bonn has called on the atomic powers to suspend nuclear tests for "a limited time" as a pledge of their intent to achieve a general controlled disarmament.

The resolution presented by Chancellor Adenauer's Christian Democrats marked one of the few times the West German leader has differed with the United States on a major international issue. President Eisenhower has contended that the tests must go on as long as Russia refuses to agree to international inspection.

Russian Statement
Russia's Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko proposed an agreement to end nuclear tests, but British press comment was that the Russian opposition was to be expected. The Daily Telegraph said each new Soviet statement makes it more difficult to believe that Moscow seriously desires agreement on terms that the west could seriously expect.

India's Prime Minister Nehru, in a speech at New Delhi, condemned atomic and hydrogen bomb tests "peace-loving nations," he said, "should work to change men's minds and hearts, which is the only way to end hate and the threat of an atomic disaster."

In the U.S. the Atomic Energy Commission went ahead with plans for tests in Nevada this year. It said it would invite representatives of 47 countries to observe some of the blasts in the series beginning May 27. No representatives of Communist countries will be invited, however, to see the tests which will have relatively low force.

Canal Argument
Prime Minister Macmillan was expected to tell the British House of Commons this week that the British government has withdrawn its objections to the resumed use of the Suez Canal by British shipping.

Informed sources prior to the prime minister's appearance said the government statement would be hedged with reservations of principle. It was hoped these would meet the criticism of some Conservative party supporters who consider that payment of tolls to the Egyptian Suez Authority would be a major retreat for British policy.

British ministers are expected to reserve all rights to appeal to the United Nations, should practical difficulties arise in the use of the canal under Egyptian management. But a return to use of the waterway would in fact end the open dispute with Egypt's President Nasser which started last July with his decision to nationalize the vital waterway.

Middle East Effort
The United States has granted about $120,000,000 in emergency military and economic aid to Middle East countries to help safeguard them against Communism.

Special Ambassador James P. Richards disclosed this at Washington after his flying visit to 12 Middle East countries as White House envoy. He said the money came from an emergency $300,000,000 fund which Congress provided last March in response to President Eisenhower's plea for broad authority to use dollars and military power to block Russian threats to the region.

Richards said nearly half of the money he allocated was for "gun-tanks and things of that kind." The remainder went for economic aid projects.

Dictator Topped

Bogota, capital of the South American republic of Colombia, took on a holiday atmosphere last week-end as Colombians celebrated the collapse of Gustavo Rojas Pinillas four-year dictatorship.

The Liberals and Conservatives, the two traditional political parties whose opposition bolstered the strikes and demonstrations that brought down Rojas, announced support of interim rule by a new military junta. The new junta promised to bring order to the country, restore political and press freedom, and to step down next year in favor of a freely-elected civilian government.

But in the wake of the unrest, a tally showed at least 141 dead, including 30 caught in a stampede when troops tried to clear joyous crowds from Bogota's main plaza after Rojas resigned the presidency. Rojas, 56 year old former army chief who seized power in a bloodless coup in June, 1953, headed for exile in Bermuda.

Atomic Ships

British scientists may solve the problem of nuclear propulsion for average-size merchant ships. The disclosure was made by Sir Christopher Hinton, managing director of the industrial section of Britain's atomic energy authority.

More than 100 reporters, including some from Russia and Communist China, visited the site of Scotland's first experimental atomic station and were told that the

Natural Gas Coming To Burlington Soon

BURLINGTON — Natural gas will be coming to Burlington soon, it was announced by T. Pinckard, general manager of the United Suburban Gas Company, who addressed Burlington Council at their meeting recently.

He invited Council to be present at an informal meeting of the Ontario Fuel Board and the municipalities concerned to be held at the Burlington Town Hall on May 15 at which information will be given as to the future rates.

The new rates for natural gas are set by the Ontario Fuel Board but Mr. Pinckard said consumers may expect a considerable reduction in heating.

Historical Society To be Formed Locally

BURLINGTON — At an informal meeting held recently at the home of Mel B. Johnson, plans were made for the formation of a Burlington and District Historical Society. Many subjects were discussed and the need of such a society was firmly established in the minds of those present.

In attendance were: Rev. W. J. Zimmerman, Mohawk Institute, Brantford, vice-president of the Brant Historical Society; Harry M. Henderson, president of the Brant Historical Society; Alva Moore, Mrs. J. Moses, Walter D. Rutherford, manager of the Brantford Board of Trade; Hugh Monaghan, president of the Burlington Rotary club; Doug Johnson and Mel Johnson. Further particulars will be given shortly.

Mrs. J. Jany Hostess To I.O.D.E. Meeting

The Duke of Devonshire Chapter I.O.D.E. met at the home of Mrs. J. Jany for their May meeting.

Plans were discussed for the Chapter's participation in the Community Night to be held in the early fall.

Mrs. Buchner reviewed briefly the new book, Freedom Wears a Crown by John Farthing, a Canadian philosopher of great learning. In this thought-provoking book, he points out the differences between the democratic monarchical system we inherited from Britain and the foundations of American republicanism. He feels our country should be called the Kingdom of Canada and give more loyalty to our Queen than so much to our geography and natural resources.

Miss Joan Howe, assisted by Miss D. Cronewick, gave a demonstration of the Holger-Nelson method of rearticulation.

Guest speaker was Sandy Best of Georgetown. Mr. Best spoke of his farm in Georgetown where experimental work is carried on for the government. By using species plants of different kinds from all parts of the world, varieties are developed that will best suit our climate and us. Plants that will be hardy and easy of growth as well as ornamental.
